CAR THAT INJURED FORD SAID TO HAVE CHASED HIS COUPE

Studebaker Which Forced Him Over Embankment Waited for Him Near Plant, It Is Reported.

AUTO MAN'S STORY OF THE ACCIDENT

He Is Said to Have Noticed, Before the Collision, the Machine Which Thrust Him Off the Road.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, Mich., March 31.—Secrecy and mystery have surrounded the accident to Henry Ford and some of the facts remain obscure, but the correspondent understands that the version given by Ford himself to his personal circle was substantially as follows:

Early Sunday evening he got his Ford coupe out of the garage at his home, near Dearborn, to drive to his private laboratory, half a mile west. The route lies over Michigan avenue, a wide boulevard bisected by a parkway. About 100 yards west of the main gate to the Ford estate the road crosses the river Rouge, a small stream bridged with a concrete viaduct.

Side-Swiped by Large Car. As Ford emerged from his gate and turned west into Michigan avenue he saw a large Studebaker parked near the entrance, and occupied by two men. They waved at him, and Ford, accustomed to such salutes, waved back, although he did not recognize the men.

He remained at the laboratory until about 8 o'clock when he got into his coupe and started home. He had just crossed the concrete bridge when a large car containing two men came up from behind at high speed, and as it passed, swerved across in front of him, side-swiping the left front wheel of his coupe.

He believed that the car and its occupants were the same as those which he had seen near his gate when he started out, and Ford is habitually careful of his statements.

The collision threw the coupe about at right angles, causing it to jump the six-inch curb, which guards the road way and to head down a 10-foot embankment, at the bottom of which is a more gentle incline sloping to the river.

Ford retained sufficient control of the car to swerve to the right, and a large tree toward which it was plunging. The left front fender, however, struck the tree, after which the car turned over on its side.

Storm in Progress.

Ford was knocked unconscious, but apparently recovered consciousness a few minutes later. The motor was still running. He turned it off, crawled out, climbed the embankment, and staggered toward his home. Although it was only 100 yards to the entrance, where a watchman was on duty in the lodge, he had to sit down and rest twice. It was cold and sleeting. Finally he got to the watchman, in great excitement, called Mrs. Ford on the house telephone, and the came running down to the lodge. Together they helped Ford into the house and summoned a doctor.

That is substantially the story told by Ford.

Investigators claim to have found witnesses who say that during the time Ford was in his laboratory, a large Studebaker containing two men was parked in the street outside, and that when Ford emerged and drove toward his home, the car turned around and followed him. Consequently, the investigators are endeavoring to find the Studebaker and its occupants. Those engaged in the search include, in addition to the police of Detroit and Dearborn, a large number of inspectors from the Ford plants. The plant police were notified of the incident soon after it happened and they swept the roads for miles around Dearborn but without result.

Reasons for Secrecy.

Ford's anxiety for secrecy prevented him from being removed from his home until Tuesday night, when his physicians finally prevailed upon him to be taken to the Henry Ford Hospital.

The desire to maintain secrecy arose from several causes. One was the fact that Ford himself objected particularly to the incident being interpreted not as an accident but an assault.

When attorneys defending Ford in the trial of Aaron Saprow's $1,000,000 suit learned Monday morn-

JACQUELINE SCHALLY, photographed upon her arrival at New York.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 31.—Jacqueline Schally, 18-year-old French motion picture actress, detained at Ellis Island since her arrival Tuesday morning, has been admitted to the United States under a $500 bond. Additional witnesses are expected to appear today to attempt to establish Miss Schally's contention that she came here as a visitor and not permanently. She was forced to give bond because the special board of inquiry which heard her case was not fully satisfied.

ing of the injury to their client, they privately informed Federal Judge Raymond, the trial judge, because they had promised to produce Ford as a witness when Saprow's counsel asked for him, and were unable to do so. Judge Raymond immediately saw another aspect of the matter.

The jury in the case is not locked up. There is nothing to prevent the members from reading the newspapers, and the judge was apprehensive that they might draw inferences from the incident which would prejudice them in the case. So, to Ford's insistence upon secrecy, was added Judge Raymond's concern.

Despite all the precautions, however, the facts got out yesterday and the Ford family and business representatives decided to make a public statement.

U. S. FLYERS IN VENEZUELA

Aviators Wrecked in Buenos Aires Arrive in New Plane.

CARACAS, Venezuela, March 31.—The three planes of the United States army good-will squadron, nearing the end of their flight over Central and South American countries, arrived at Puerto Cabello, near Caracas, yesterday afternoon from Port of Spain, Trinidad.

They were greeted by Lieuts. Weddington and Whitehead, who were part of the expedition before being replaced this summer by smooth asphalt. Director of Streets and Sewers Brooks announced today.

The cost, about $12,500, will be drawn from the gasoline tax fund accumulated by an assessment of one-half a cent a gallon for motor thoroughfare improvements. The viaduct is on a route used almost daily by funeral processions.

The paving of the Union boulevard viaduct over the Terminal Railroad tracks in North St. Louis, which has become full of "shell holes" through the expansion and contraction of the wood blocks, will be replaced this summer by smooth asphalt. Director of Streets and Sewers Brooks announced today.

MINERS ORDERED TO QUIT WORK AT MIDNIGHT TONIGHT

Operators Say 150,000 Men Will be Idle, But Union Says Many Owners Signed Truce.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 31.—Conflicting reports as to the extent of the mining shutdown in the central competitive field came today from operators and miners' leaders as they prepared for expiration of the Jacksonville wage agreement at midnight.

Operators' spokesmen in Illinois, Iowa and Ohio maintained that tomorrow would find virtually all of the mines, which employ 150,000 men, idle. Union officers, however, announced that a number of operators had concluded agreements to continue work pending a general settlement.

The United Mine Workers pointed out that any cessation of work would not be termed a strike, as it was possible for individual operators to continue under the present agreement. All activity will stop, however, they said, where agreements are unsigned.

Illinois claims of a large number of temporary agreements were met by statements by operators that the mines involved were small and that the coal produced by them had no commercial significance. The union said that 30 Iowa mines would continue work with an equal number operating in Illinois, while F. J. Bender, secretary of Subdistrict No. 6, announced at Zanesville, O., that 12 to 15 mine operators in that area had signed a willingness to operate while awaiting settlement.

"Conditions adjacent to Zanesville will be unchanged," Bender said, "inasmuch as all operating companies, with one exception, have declared their intention to keep the mines in operation on the Jacksonville scale."

Likewise, announcement was made that several Indiana operators had signed temporary agreements and that others were expected to follow today. Most of these mines were small ones. It was said that the union had secured a number of strip mines, producing 20 per cent of the State's coal, would enter an agreement.

Efforts at settlement of the controversy still were being made. Gov. Hammill of Iowa, said he had invited the union to Iowa miners and operators together in conference to avert tomorrow's shutdown.

President Miller of the Illinois operators, said he would welcome any new move by miners, and had invited them to meet with operators to accept the suggestion that work continue pending an agreement, maintaining that no mine in Illinois could operate under the present wage agreement and make money, because of competition from non-union mines.

A district conference has been proposed by Indiana miners, but action of the operators was problematical.

St. Louis Industries Protected by Storage Coal.

The railroads and other industries of the St. Louis district, as a general rule, are protected against the impending shutdown of mines at midnight by storage coal. During the past six weeks, with the Illinois mines running full time, the railroads without exception have built up large piles of coal in yards to meet their demands for 60 or 90 days; the public utilities and the larger industries of the city have from 60 to 90 days' supply of storage coal in their bins, and it is estimated that the dealers have 150,000 tons on hand. The City of St. Louis recently purchased 20,000 tons of Kentucky coal for storage to protect the waterworks and various city institutions.

The domestic consumer will not feel any effect of the situation for some time because he will need no coal. But dealers declare that in the event the shutdown continues 90 days or more, as is predicted, there will be difficulty in obtaining winter coal in the late summer and fall.

Seventy-two thousand miners in 225 Illinois mines will quit tonight unless the unexpected happens. In the Belleville district, which is nearest to St. Louis, about 7000 miners will be thrown out of work.

after the committee amendments had been passed, offered one to strike from the bill the section regarding McGrunder's $1500. The duties of Secretary McGrunder are to keep the minutes of the board meetings, for which he now receives $5 a day when the board is in session. The bill sought to make his duty to visit the institutions as an excuse for the $1500 salary. McGrunder's amendment was defeated. McGrunder formerly having been a member of the Senate and having a number of friends among the Senators.

The bill now goes to the House for conference in the Senate amendments. Senator Brogan said that if the House did not agree to the amendment the bill would be killed in the Senate on its return.

BANK IS ANXIOUS TO CLOSE BUT ITS DEPOSITORS PROTEST

Liquidation of Benton (Mo.) Bank Begun But Clients Refuse to Withdraw Their Money.

Special to the Post-Dispatch. CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo., March 31.—The Bank of Benton, at Benton, the county seat of Scott County, wants to close, but, although depositors have been asked to withdraw their money, most of the money still is on hand, there is no sign of a run and the officers are urged to change their minds and not close. Liquidation was started yesterday after a State bank examiner had gone over the books and agreed to it.

Two reasons are given for the reluctance of the County citizens to withdraw their money, in spite of the fact that there have been rumors for several weeks that the institution was in hard circumstances. One is that the depositors have faith in the officers, W. H. Heisey, president, and Alfred Christman, cashier. The other is that it is the only surviving bank in a wide district because four failures in the last year have deprived as many towns of banks.

The Benton Bank today had the distinction of carrying on a general banking business except that it would receive no deposits. The bank's last statement showed deposits of $158,960. It is capitalized at $45,000.

WOMAN ACQUITTED OF MURDER OF HUSBAND AT SECOND TRIAL

Mrs. Ollie Sanders of Caruthersville Charged With Helping "Other Man" Kill Mate.

Special to the Post-Dispatch. CARUTHERSVILLE, Mo., March 31.—Mrs. Ollie Sanders, 30 years old, was found not guilty by a jury in Circuit Court this morning of the murder, on June 6, 1924, of her husband, Boyd Sanders, 35. It was Mrs. Sanders' second trial, the jury in the first trial disagreeing.

Claude Howard is serving a life term in the Missouri penitentiary for his part in the murder. He was found guilty at New Madrid last year.

Sanders was beaten to death with an iron rod. His body was then loaded into an automobile by Howard, and taken into the woods where it was hidden. Six days later the body was found and Howard and Mrs. Sanders were arrested. Mrs. Sanders' defense was an alibi. She maintained she was in Arkansas at the home of relatives when her husband was killed.

RAPID TRANSIT BILL'S CHANCES GROW SLIMMER

Objections Prevent Senator Kinney From Advancing Its Position on the Calendar.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 31.—Chances for passage of the rapid transit enabling bill by the Senate appeared more uncertain today, following refusal of the Senate last night to permit Senator Kinney of St. Louis to take the bill up out of the regular order on the third reading calendar for final passage.

When Kinney attempted to bring the bill up from its position near the bottom of the calendar, Painter of Carrollton objected that the regular order should be followed. Several other Senators rose to object.

Ninety-six house bills are ahead of the rapid transit act on the Senate calendar, which makes it doubtful whether the Senate will reach the bill before adjournment now tentatively scheduled for Saturday night.

Kinney to Try Again.

All of last evening was spent by the Senate in passage of House bills and only 12 bills were handled. A considerable part of the remaining sessions will be spent by the Senate in consideration or conference reports on appropriation bills. Kinney today stated further opposition appeared to be developing against the transit bill, but he would make another attempt to get it up out of regular order on the ground of its great importance to St. Louis.

President Kinney of the St. Louis Board of Public Service and C. E. Smith, consulting engineer for the City, are here to urge action on the bill. They turned over to Kinney three substitute amendments which they hope to have adopted by the Senate instead of the three amendments recommended by the Senate Municipal Corporations Committee which, if adopted, may kill the bill or restrict its provisions to an extent that would prevent development of a rapid transit system in St. Louis.

Assessment Cost.

One of the substitute amendments would limit special benefit assessments on property within the special benefit district formed for construction of a rapid transit line to not more than 75 per cent of the cost. It also limits the assessments on property abutting the line to not more than 50 per cent of the cost. This is intended to replace the committee amendment limiting benefit assessments to not more than 40 per cent of the cost.

Another amendment would fix the majority required in an election to approve a rapid transit project at four-sevenths of the vote cast on the proposition, instead of two-thirds as proposed in a committee amendment.

The third proposal by the city is to eliminate a committee amendment requiring the city to obtain the consent of owners of 51 per cent of the property abutting a proposed transit line, before an election could be called to approve construction of the line.

SENATE LIKELY TO ACT ON ORRICK NOMINATION TODAY

Vote on Confirmation, Virtually Assured, Delayed While Other Legislation Is Considered.

Special to the Post-Dispatch. JEFFERSON CITY, March 31.—Action by the Senate on the confirmation of Allen Orrick as president of the St. Louis Board of Police Commissioners, which had been expected yesterday, was postponed by Senate leaders to push through other legislation. The appointment likely will be considered this afternoon, before he resubmitted Orrick's name Tuesday.

There has been no change in the line-up of Senators so far as can be ascertained, and it remains probable that Orrick would be confirmed with six or seven votes to spare. The four St. Louis Republicans have not abandoned their opposition, however, and have been busy to line up Senators to oppose confirmation.

It is understood, however, that Gov. Baker had a sufficient number of Senators pledged to vote for confirmation before he resubmitted Orrick's name Tuesday.

18 INDICTMENTS RETURNED IN CLOSING OF TWO BANKS

St. Joseph (Mo.) Prosecutor Withdraws Names of Nine Persons Pending Arrests.

By the Associated Press. ST. JOSEPH, Mo., March 31.—Eighteen sealed indictments, growing out of the closing of the Security State Bank, May 12, 1924, and the Fidelity Trust Co., Dec. 28, were returned by a grand jury in the Buchanan County Criminal Court today, following an investigation which began Feb. 14.

While no names were made public pending arrests, nine individuals were indicted, Homer King, prosecuting attorney, said.

The grand jury report stated there was no criminal action in connection with the closing of the Bartlett Trust Co., Dec. 28.

The cost. It also limits the assessments on property abutting the line to not more than 50 per cent of the cost. This is intended to replace the committee amendment limiting benefit assessments to not more than 40 per cent of the cost.

Another amendment would fix the majority required in an election to approve a rapid transit project at four-sevenths of the vote cast on the proposition, instead of two-thirds as proposed in a committee amendment.

BILL TO CHANGE METHOD OF BANK LIQUIDATIONS DEFEATED

State Finance Department in Retain Control of Affairs of Insolvent Depositories.

Special to the Post-Dispatch. JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., March 31.—The House today defeated a bill, previously passed by the Senate, which would have taken the liquidation of defunct banks out of the hands of the State Finance Department and substituted liquidation by the Circuit Court in whose jurisdiction the closed bank was situated. The bill received 44 votes in the House, 10 less than the required majority.

The bill was introduced by Senator James Whitcomb of Paris, who has protested in the past against large fees paid to special attorneys in bank liquidation cases. It required the Finance Commissioner, after taking possession of a bank, to submit proof of the insolvency of the bank to the Circuit Court, which also would give the bank directors a hearing. If the bank was adjudged insolvent, the court would appoint a receiver, who would liquidate the bank's assets under supervision of the court.

Under the present law the Finance Department conducts the liquidation, through a special deputy commissioner, but all official acts of the commissioner, his expenditures and the sale or disposition of assets, are subject to approval by the Circuit Court.

HALT IN PLANS FOR $6,000,000 HOTEL EXPLAINED

T. W. McManus, Eccentric,
Who Died Saturday,
Wanted $200,000 for Lot
Assessed at $37,250.

The plans of a St. Louis syndicate for a new $6,000,000 hotel were brought to an uncompromising standstill recently. It was learned today, by a high price set upon a lot at 1214 Olive street by Thomas Ward McManus, wealthy eccentric who died Saturday at his old-fashioned home at 2743 Lucas avenue, in the midst of a Negro neighborhood.

McManus, as was told yesterday, left a fortune estimated at $800,000 which has been taken in charge by Public Administrator Hampe because no will has been found to dispose of it. The only heir is a niece, Mrs. Camilla Burrows, wife of a wealthy architect of Davenport, Ia.

Among the pieces of downtown real estate owned by the McManus estate is the 25-foot lot on Olive street, one of the parcels which the syndicate had to buy to make up the site for the proposed hotel to be built east of the new Missouri Pacific Building, and fronting on Twelfth boulevard.

Details of Negotiations.

The two lots to the east of the McManus property, 1210 and 1212 Olive street, were offered to the syndicate at $125,000. Nathan Frank, attorney and a member of the syndicate, said today. With a front of 50 feet on Olive street the price was, therefore, $2500 a foot. The improvement on the property, an old brick building, was considered of no value, since it had to be torn down for the widening of Olive street.

McManus, however, set a price of $200,000 on his lot, or $8000 a foot. Repeated visits were made to the old stone front house on Lucas avenue to persuade him to bring his price down, but he was adamant. The syndicate finally was forced to drop its plans about 50 days ago, and since then had felt it was useless to proceed with its project. Now that McManus is dead, another effort will be made to purchase his lot at a figure which the syndicate considers reasonable. McManus' lot was assessed for taxation at $37,250, which assessors say is about three-fourths of its value.

Among the eccentricities of McManus, as told yesterday, was the closing of the home of his mother at 2743 Lucas avenue, next door to his home. Two years after she died in 1905, he had the doors and windows locked and moved into the house to the east. Since that time the house at 2743 has been visited only on rare occasions when he suspected someone may have got in the place. No one else had been in the place but himself for 20 years until the Public Administrator's force entered it Monday.

Had Racing Establishment.

McManus' 100-acre farm on Manchester road, just east of Kirkwood, was once an extensive establishment on which he maintained a stable of race horses, a private race track, and a lake extensively stocked with game fish. After the McManus Building at Fourth and Market streets was torn down more than 15 years ago, McManus had his attorney buy four statues which had been salvaged from the wreckage by a junk firm and these he placed on concrete piers on the Manchester roadside of his farm, where they still stand. They typify commerce and other phases of the nation's life.

So far searchers have found only an unsigned will, drawn for McManus by an attorney less than a year ago, but never approved by him and therefore incompetent. It is understood he had previously made a will leaving his estate to his wife, but she died in October, 1925.

FRENCH TO SHOOT CLAY BIRDS
New Club Formed to Rival One at Monte Carlo.

By the Associated Press.
MONTE CARLO, March 31.—For years humane societies have protested in vain against the pigeon shoots held in Monte Carlo, under the auspices of the Casino. Thousands of birds are slaughtered to provide amusement for the sportsmen who congregate at the gambling center of Europe.

Now a group of American, British, French and allied marksmen have decided to do more than protest. They have formed a rival shooting club, with headquarters at Cagnes-sur-Mer, halfway between Nice and Cannes. It is announced that the American clay pigeon will be held exclusively. This is the first time that a definite step has been taken to rival any of the sporting activities of Monte Carlo.

THREE STORES ROBBED OF $225 IN HALF HOUR

Holdupmen, in Stolen Auto, Escape From Police and Bullets in Chase.

The stolen Nash automobile which was used by three men who robbed Flint Garrison, president of the Garden Theater, and his family, Monday night, appeared again last night when three men executed a series of three robberies, escaping under fire.

The men held up the grocery of Alex Bennett, 4132 North Euclid avenue, at 6 p. m., taking $45. Fifteen minutes later they held up Charles Valenti in his grocery at 4779 Plover avenue, taking $100 in cash and a 12-pound ham, and at 6:30 o'clock they obtained $50 from the grocery of Charles Kropel, 4239 Olive street, reported.

By the time the third robbery was committed the police notified of the earlier holdups, were on the lookout, and at Lee and Warne avenues, Sgt. Arthur Schroeder and Patrolman Elmer Simpson, in a police car, recognized the Nash car going east. They pursued it to Grand boulevard and south, firing 10 shots, but lost the trail when the robber's car shot past a standing street car where a crowd of pedestrians caused the pursuers to slow down.

The Nash automobile was stolen Saturday night from Louis C. Johnson, 5148 Washington boulevard, in a holdup.

$500 Taken From Auto Dealer Seeking to Replevin a Car.

F. Marion Williams, automobile dealer at 4330 Olive street, reported that he was held up and robbed of $500 cash by two masked men last night in the alley behind 4381 Forest Park boulevard, where he was hunting for a garage in which was kept a time payment automobile he planned to replevin from the purchaser, who had defaulted in the payments.

Williams said he had driven to the alley and was inspecting the car when a Chrysler automobile drew up beside his machine and two men with handkerchief masks and revolvers held him up. "Bill," one of them said, "you've got money on you and we want it."

Williams said one of the robbers reached directly for his shirt pocket, where he usually concealed his money, and removed the roll of bills. Two hours later, at Fifteenth and Olive streets, police arrested two men in an automobile such as Williams described, but he could not identify them.

Armed Man Binds Victims Before Robbing Two Kroger Stores.

An armed man who binds his victims' hands behind their backs obtained $23 in visits to two Kroger stores. At noon yesterday he took $7 from Victor Burnett, manager, at 3942 Iowa avenue. At 2 a. m. today he robbed George Feld, manager at 3201 Caroline street, of $16. In each instance, the manager was tied and compelled to lie in the floor.

Zon Trantham, 3948 Delmar boulevard, reported that a Negro with a revolver robbed him of $5 at 2 a. m. today on Spring avenue near Olive street.

Burglars battered open a safe in the National Lumber Co. office, 2620 Lucas avenue, last night and took $25.

Her speed... she holds all world's records;

Her menu... an irresistible story of expert chefs' and fine food.

ELECTION TUESDAY IN 12 TOWNS OF ST. LOUIS COUNTY

Webster Groves and Maplewood Mayors and Aldermen Face Strong Opposition Tickets.

$30,000 BOND ISSUE IN UNIVERSITY CITY

Richmond Heights and Brentwood Also Expect Sharp Contests; New Party Candidates in Kirkwood.

Elections will be held Tuesday in 12 St. Louis County towns and in 20 school districts, with more than the usual amount of opposition for city offices.

The spotlight of general interest is focused on Webster Groves' "lumberyard fight," so-called because both candidates for Mayor are in the lumber business. Mayor J. B. Chipman, heading the Good Government ticket, and Fred Hokekamp, majority candidate of the People's Party, opened headquarters several weeks ago, and the campaign which opened friendly enough has lost some of its pleasantness as it gained momentum, although there is no bitterness.

The primary election, March 22, indicated the equality of strength. Chipman polling 1075 and Hokekamp 1010. Chipman's candidates for Alderman, Dr. W. F. O'Malley, former County Health Commissioner, and Herbert H. Yates, received 950 and 976, respectively. William Stoecker and Edward Wilson, Hokekamp's running mates, received 978 each.

Hokekamp was requested to run for Alderman on the Good Government ticket several months ago, but decided to head the opposition.

Opposition in Kirkwood.
Even in Kirkwood, which has a reputation for harmony, there having been no opposition for several years, a People's party has been formed to oppose the administration slate, known as the Harmony party.

The chief criticism of the administration is the perdition of Kirkwood in its water supply. The water system, which is municipally operated, wells near the Meramec River supply the water.

The water plant was constructed there under an easement from the owner with the agreement that water would be supplied Osage Hills and Woodbine Heights, subdivisions outside the Kirkwood limits. Circuit Judge McElhinney issued an injunction, restraining Kirkwood from furnishing water outside its city limits, this being in competition with the St. Louis County Water Co. An appeal is pending in the Supreme Court.

A special election will be held April 16 on a proposition to extend the Kirkwood limits almost to Barrett Station road in order to overcome the objection.

Aldermanic Candidates.

The term of Mayor R. L. Jacobsmeier does not expire until next year, but the People's party has a complete ticket of aldermanic candidates. They are: First Ward, T. J. Kinsella; Second Ward, Carl Wipke; Third Ward, Dr. R. H. Heublein; Fourth Ward (two to be elected), Thomas Collins and Charles Tallir.

The Harmony candidates are: Wallace A. Bell, Carl C. Irwin, Thomas L. Moriarty and Martin McDonnell, incumbent, and Frank F. Stone.

Mayor Eugene D. Ruth of University City, Marshal George F. Ward, Collector William S. Steele and Alderman Arthur E. Ebbs of the Second Ward are unopposed for re-election. William J. Cronin has filed in opposition to Police Judge A. A. Ladd. In the First Ward, Alderman Frank L. Mackey has two opponents, Joseph Hobbs and Edward Weber. Alderman Arthur E. Ebbs, Second Ward, is unopposed. There will be a three-cornered race in the Third Ward also, between Alderman Orval C. Sutter, William C. N. Smith and Frank Wyle.

Whether a proposal to extend the city limits north to a line 150 feet north of Olive boulevard and west to McKnight road can be submitted, as provided by ordinance, will depend upon the action of the Clayton courts on a petition of residents in this area to incorporate. If the petition is granted by the County Court, these residents would have to ratify the annexation.

Vote no Bond Issue.

A temporary injunction preventing the County Court from acting on the petition to incorporate "Olive City" was granted Monday by Circuit Judge McElhinney.

University City also will vote on two proposed bond issues. One proposal provides for $30,000 for construction of a bridge over the River des Peres near Midland and Aherne boulevards, which, with improvement of Midland avenue, will provide a connecting highway between Olive boulevard and St. Charles road. The other proposal is for $50,000 to build a new fire station on Olive boulevard near Pennsylvania avenue.

Clayton. Alderman Andrew J. Shore of the Fourth Ward has the only opposition, O. E. Martos, 2342 against him. Police Judge Tennyson.

ELECTION TUESDAY IN 12 TOWNS OF ST. LOUIS COUNTY

Stecker and Aldermen John E. Eggers, Joseph Strong, John Lynes and Glenn Mohler will be returned to office.

Valley Park.—Dr. Richard Collins, incumbent, and J. O. Sturdy have announced for Police Judge; Henry C. Hildebrand, incumbent, is unopposed for Collector. Alderman W. P. Vance and Theodore Reifling seek to represent the First Ward in the City Council. Alderman John Reddinger and W. H. Cochran, Second Ward; Alderman A. L. Mellett is without opposition in the Third Ward; and Wilson Adams and Albert McCullough have filed in the Fourth Ward.

Contest in Maplewood.—Maplewood—Mayor Eugene Burke faces a hard fight for reelection. In the primary March 22, with only his present opponent, Charles S. Humphrey, opposing him, Burke was beaten 796 to 524. Burke's supporters claim that since the primary meant nothing, no effort was made to get out a vote for him, while his opponent worked actively to create an effect. The candidates for councilmen are unopposed. They are P. P. Casner and John D. Fels, George A. McGregor and William D. Robinson.

Richmond Heights.—The factions which supported James M. Jensen for Mayor last year, when a recount showed Mayor Edward Bouhman elected by three votes, has a complete Aldermanic ticket in the field. John Maloney, City Marshal, recently was exonerated by the City Council of charges made by Jensen and others that he protected hoodlums.

The opposition to the administration, known as the Citizens' Party, recently filed a petition for incorporation in Circuit Court at Clayton. Its candidates for the five wards are Richard T. Krohn, incumbent; Frank G. Horton, Charles H. DuBois, incumbent; C. M. Corbett, incumbent, and James P. Bushnell.

The administration candidates are Mrs. Agnes Tombs, Mrs. Mary Hoffmann, incumbent; Frank Moran, M. O. Gannaway and Alfred N. O'Brien. O. F. Buchter is an independent candidate in the Fifth Ward.

Three Brentwood Tickets.—Brentwood—Candidates for the five offices of trustee are not lacking. Mayor William A. Withrow, Robert L. Jones and Edward J. Burke form one slate. Opposing them, on a platform calling for elimination of the fee system in the town court and the abolition of numerous special deputy marshals who prey upon motorists for compensation, are Joseph B. Tothoff, incumbent; William McManus, incumbent; Henry K. Farcher, incumbent, and William Kenney, incumbent. They propose a salaried Police Judge and policemen.

An independent ticket also is in the field. Its candidates are Joseph W. Hornback, Edward W. Bristol, Marvin N. Y. Parsons, Guy E. Wilson and Charles H. Miller Jr. A proposition to increase the city tax from 12 cents to 20 cents for one year, for construction of a second story to the city hall and a building for a new fire truck, also will be submitted.

Ferguson.—Mayor W. H. Tiffin is opposed for a third term by S. R. Millman, Marshal Irvin H. Skinner, Edward C. Etling and S. P. Frazier are candidates for Marshal and ex-officio Collector. In the First Ward, Otis H. Graf, Henry L. Twillman and George A. McFarland seek to succeed W. H. Howard as Alderman. Alderman Charles E. Musick, Second Ward, is opposed by N. Leaver; S. R. McClure and John J. Fahey are opponents in the Third Ward, and Alderman O. A. Mason and G. W. Owen are unopposed in the Fourth and Fifth wards, respectively.

Serves Fifteenth Term.—Glendale—Mayor O. K. White has no opposition for reelection. Likewise, Collector F. P. Sackbauer and Marshal Thomas O'Mara have been the only candidates to file for these posts. Two Aldermen will be elected for the First Ward. Those who have filed are Aldermen August Kern Jr., R. A. Seeman, and W. W. Schlek. T. F. Petri and Charles Signor are the only candidates in the Second and Third wards. Dr. C. H. Barnett is running for Police Judge.

Florissant.—Mayor Sidney R. Garrett will be elected to his sixteenth one-year term, no one else having filed. Aldermen from the three wards, Sidney Tebeau, Henry Niehoff and John W. Storer, are unopposed to succeed themselves.

Oakland.—The five Trustees have filed for reelection and no opposition has developed. They are: Mayor Howard E. Nichols, Harry Borkhart, W. P. Koken, Dr. L. D. Le Gear and Edward Kolb. The village claims to be the only town in St. Louis County not in debt. It has a bank balance of $2600.

MRS. CLARA BOEHMER'S WILL. Relatives Get $10,000; Charities Receive Legacies.

Mrs. Clara Boehmer of 5162 Maple avenue, who died last Friday, in her will, filed yesterday for probate, left specific bequests of $2000 to charities, $6000 for memorials for her daughter, Mrs. Norma K. Stern, and the residual estate to the Emmaus Asylum in St. Charles County.

The German Protestant Orphans' Home in St. Louis County, the German General Protestant Orphans' Home in St. Louis, and the Children's Home Society of Missouri receive $1000 each. For memorials to Mrs. Stern $1000 was left to the public library of Las Vegas, N. Mex., and $5000 to the University of Missouri chapter of Delta Delta Delta Sorority. A $5000 bequest was made to a daughter-in-law, Mrs. Jennie Boehmer Pitaloga, and $5000 to Meyer, for the comfort of their sister, Mrs. Leonora Krucken, aunt, Mrs. Mary Bickenkampfer.

BILL TO BAR HASTY WEDDINGS

Five-Day Wait For License Urged by Chicago Judges.

CHICAGO, March 31.—In an effort to decrease the number of divorces by making hasty marriages more difficult, a committee of five Cook County judges yesterday drafted a bill which will be introduced in the State Senate April 6. The bill provides that an application must be filed five days before the County Clerk issues a marriage license.

The bill provides that the applicants shall fill out questionnaires on their personal history. Such information, together with the application, would be posted five days giving objectors time to file a protest in the County Court.

SIDENER BLOCKED INVESTIGATION OF BONDSMAN ROSE

Told Grand Jury It Had No Jurisdiction Over Defaulting Surety's Alleged Perjury.

Called Offense 'ONLY MISDEMEANOR'

Volunteered Information—Later on Virtually Same Evidence Federal Indictment Was Obtained.

An attempt by the grand jury to investigate the case of Louis Rose, professional bondsman, who gave a false affidavit to Circuit Judge Frey setting forth his qualifications, was blocked recently by Circuit Attorney Sidener, who told the grand jurors they had no jurisdiction in the case.

Rose has been indicted by the Federal Grand Jury for perjury on evidence similar to that against him in the State case and on a charge identical with it, namely, "making a false affidavit to obtain the release of a prisoner." However, Circuit Attorney Sidener told the State grand jurors that Rose's offense was not indictable.

He indicated that in his opinion, and speaking as the official advisor of the grand jury, Rose's offense was at best only a misdemeanor. He did not promise the grand jurors that Rose would be prosecuted in the Court of Criminal Correction on a misdemeanor charge, but indicated, rather, that it was a closed incident. Perjury is punishable by a seven years' sentence in the penitentiary. A misdemeanor conviction might bring a sentence of a year in jail and $500 fine or both.

Sidener Volunteers Explanation.

The appearance of Circuit Attorney Sidener as an intercessor for Rose came as a surprise to the grand jurors. They had discussed the case among themselves, following a report to Paul Conrad, foreman of the jury, that political friends of Rose had sought to use influence in his behalf. The grand jurors decided privately to summon Sidener and ask him why he had delayed presentation of the Rose case for five months.

Before word could be sent to Sidener that the grand jury wished to question him on the matter, the Circuit Attorney appeared and, without a question being asked him, volunteered an explanation of his stand.

"You may be asked to consider the Louis Rose case," Sidener remarked, "and I wish to say that it does not come under the grand jury's jurisdiction."

A member of the grand jury today told a Post-Dispatch reporter that the jurors felt obliged to abide by Sidener's decision, and would not attempt independent action.

Counter to View of Others.

The Circuit Attorney's interpretation of the law governing the making of a false affidavit is contrary to the view held by Federal authorities, and also contradicts an opinion of a recognized legal authority who stated when the Rose case was brought up last November that the bondsman's offense was perjury. This authority pointed out that where a bondsman files a false affidavit with the court and does not at that time obtain the release of a prisoner, but merely allows a false record to stand, it would be a misdemeanor. However, when a bondsman by a false affidavit obtains the release of a prisoner on the strength of his false statements, the offense is perjury and indictable, this authority held.

The United States District Attorney's office held the same view, as it obtained Rose's indictment for perjury on the fact that he made a false affidavit as to his qualifications. The Government was moved to act in the Rose matter after the Post-Dispatch had exposed this bondsman's trickery in the State courts.

Judge Frey's Discovery.

It is now more than a year since Rose committed the offense for which Circuit Judge Frey requested his indictment. Feb. 2, 1926, Rose signed a $10,000 bond for Tony Guarino, robbery suspect, giving to Judge Frey an affidavit saying that he owned four pieces of property and was worth $45,000 above his liabilities. Judge Frey checked up this statement and found that two pieces of property Rose claimed to own did not appear in his name at all, that one other was encumbered for more than he said, and that the fourth he had transferred to his sister.

Judge Frey reported the circumstances to the Circuit Attorney Sidener, but the Circuit Attorney decided to give Rose another chance.

Then, last November, the Post-Dispatch exposed Rose in another piece of trickery. Last Aug. 23, the same day three $10,000 bonds were forfeited against him, Rose transferred all his property to a penny from him. The bonds remain unpaid.

When Judge Frey learned of this, he decided to put an end to Rose's activities as a bondsman and requested Circuit Attorney Sidener to present the false affidavit case to the grand jury. He sent Sidener all his records in the case and offered to appear as a witness against Rose.

The preceding grand jury, in the last days of its tenure, called in I. Joel Wilson, Sidener's first assistant, and asked him why the Rose case had not been presented. Wilson replied: "It is not in proper shape."

Circuit Attorney Sidener, when asked today for a statement on his disposition of the Rose case, said: "That is a matter of office policy and I do not care to discuss it. Besides, Mr. Rose has been indicted by the Federal grand jury on information furnished by my office."

Fined $200 for Slot Machines.

Gottfried Lugge of Arthur street, Belleville, was fined $100 and costs yesterday on each of two charges of operating slot machines. He entered pleas of guilty following raids made by Sheriff Ahrens.

GERHART MAKES MARATHON SPEECH ON BRIDGE TRADE

Pioneer of 24 Years' Dispute Over Municipal
Span Talks 2½ Hours
Against Proposal.

HE MONOPOLIZES
ENTIRE HEARING

Only Once Interrupted by Citizen, Who Has Temerity to Ask a Question Which Is Ignored.

"This hearing will end at 5 o'clock," said the chairman, as the Public Utilities Committee of the Board of Aldermen sat down at 2:30 p. m. yesterday, for a fourth and final public audience on the bridge exchange bill. "Mr. Gerhart will be the first speaker."

The first speaker, it proved, was also the last. For when 5 o'clock came, Frank H. Gerhart, pioneer of the 24 years' Free Bridge dispute, was still exhorting the committee to "Note this well."

"Get that point," and "Come down to brass tacks."

A gathering at times as large as 25 persons, besides the official listeners, heard this, not Gerhart's first marathon bridge speech, but one for which he had unusual opportunities as to time and attention. The citizenry moved in and out of the board chamber during the two and one-half hours, but the faithful committee stuck to its un-cushioned chairs like "Shipwreck" Kelly on his flaps.

Interrupted Only Once. 6

Only one person had the temerity to interrupt the speeding recital. At about the time that would correspond to the seventh inning, a man arose to stretch, and put a question. The query was indirectly framed, and Gerhart stopped only long enough to admonish the man to "go and learn the English language." Then he resumed the reading of a long report, punctuated by such explanatory terms as "quotation," "end quotation," "Railroads with a small R," and "railroads with a small r."

"I'll omit this to save your time," was his considerate remark at some points. Once, the time thus gained was lost in the reading of a paragraph which proved not to relate to the subject, and it took a quick and efficient job of switching to get the speech back upon the main line—a line which appeared to have no terminal facilities except those ultimately supplied by the chairman's gavel.

The bill for exchange of uses of the Eads and Municipal bridges, on which this and the three previous hearings were held, will die in committee with the end of the Board's present session next week, members have indicated. Gerhart's argument against the bill was for the committee's consideration in the next session, when the bill may be reintroduced. Also, he discussed the northeast approach.

Northeast Approach Discussed.

That approach, known by Gerhart's name, was provided for, to the extent of $1,500,000, in the 1923 bond issue, with a like sum for the southern approach. When it became apparent that the northeast approach would cost $4,000,000 to $5,000,000 and would involve litigation with East St. Louis, the movement for its construction was halted, and a referendum in the 1924 fall election resulted unfavorably to the project. Gerhart yesterday blamed a man whom he did not name, but who appeared, from his descriptive references, to be W. Frank Carter, for the setback to the northeast approach.

He urged the Aldermen to pass a resolution, directing the city Law Department to apply to the Interstate Commerce Commission for a certificate of convenience and necessity, for construction of the northeast approach, and to take other steps toward the East Side work, the congressional permit for which will expire in February, 1928. If the Commission should refuse to issue a certificate, he said, an appeal to Congress for unqualified authority would be in order, and the city would have a good case for the Federal courts. This sounded like a long program, but Gerhart, who began his fight for the bridge in 1903, takes the long view.

Rakes Terminal Association.

Next he talked of the Terminal Association, party of the other part in the proposed bridge deal with the city. He declared that its capitalization was mythical, its financial structure a house of cards, and its dividends were paid in the form of interest on bonds a charge on the city's commerce. It holds Eads Bridge and the tunnel only by lease, he argued, and hence could not deliver them legally to the city. Under the exchange ordinance, he said, when the deal should fall, the Terminal would get back Eads Bridge, with no more charges to pay than before, and in addition would have a foothold on the Municipal Bridge, from which it might not be dislodged for a half century or more.

"Your free bridge will be gone," he said, "and your grandchildren will never vote money to build another."

For Mileage Basis of Charge.

In the strongest and clearest part of his speech, Gerhart advocated the mileage basis of charge over the Municipal Bridge, with retention of the present prohibition of bridge tolls. The "wheelage" and "user" basis of charge, suggested by officials of the Alton & Southern and the Manufacturers Railway, would have no standing before the Interstate Commerce Commission, he argued, as the commission does not recognize those terms or the ideas back of them.

Gerhart remarked that the first $3,500,000 of bonds voted for the Free Bridge in 1906, would mature next year. He said he would be ready to quit the bridge fight, and would give a large sum if he could do so, but only on condition that another man with thorough knowledge of the question, and with backbone, would take his place. No one volunteered.

NORWAY'S BILL ABOLISHING
PROHIBITION IS RATIFIED

Law Setting Hours of Liquor Sales From 3 to 5 p. m. Becomes Effective Next Month.

By the Associated Press.
OSLO, Norway, March 31.—The Lagting has passed the bill abolishing prohibition in Norway, pursuant to the recent referendum. The measure has been passed by the Odelsting, the other house of Parliament, but must be sent back for approval of minor amendments.

The bill provides for certain restrictions in the sale of liquor. The new regulations are expected to become effective next month. Towns having a population of 4000 or less will vote on the sale of liquor in 1928 and hold referendums on the subject every six years thereafter.

Liquor may not be sold or served to minors and will be available to adults only from 3 p. m. to 8 p. m. The sale of liquor will be prohibited on important holidays and the day before and the day after. Maltine of liquor, except for medicinal purposes, will be prohibited.

Why Smith & Davis 120-Coil Spring Construction Means a Life-Time of Restful Nights!

NOW—amazing new principles in construction have produced the Smith & Davis GOLD SEAL Spring—and have banished spring troubles forever!

We mean just what we say—for the Smith & Davis GOLD SEAL Spring is no ordinary spring! It is one into which fifty-six years of manufacturing experience have been concentrated! The first coil spring made in 1864 by Smith & Davis is now on exhibit in the museum of the American Steel & Wire Co., Worcester, Mass. The wire still retains its resiliency after 43 years of handling. Every conceivable feature to insure life-long comfort has been provided. The coils in the ordinary spring are insufficient in number—spaced too far apart. This means that the body is unevenly supported. So the GOLD SEAL Spring has one hundred and twenty coils in the 54 in. size, nineteen more than ordinary springs. There are two layers, 240 coils in all.

This closer spacing of the coils gives restful support to every point of the body. No "hollow" can ever develop in a Smith & Davis GOLD SEAL Spring, for sag is permanently eliminated by the use of steel bands as a center reinforcement.

The springiness and enduring quality of the coils is secured through a special tempering process. The ends of the coils are turned in smooth—no sharp corners to tear the bedding. Extra heavy border wires, of the same high quality used in the coils, give added strength. Sitting on the edge of this spring never destroys the flexibility of these border wires.

Make the comparison yourself—go to your furniture dealer and see the GOLD SEAL Spring. Compare it with the most expensive make he has in stock. Then ask yourself if it would not pay you to replace your worn-out springs NOW and enjoy GOLD SEAL luxury "for the REST of your life."

Don't forget while seeing the GOLD SEAL Spring, to look also at the beautiful Smith & Davis ARTISTEEL Metal Beds your dealer has on display. For beauty, lightness, durability and low cost, these beds maintain leadership by a wide margin. And then there's the new Smith & Davis sensation—the ART-END Day Beds everyone is talking about. ## POWER SITE SALES AWAKEN PEOPLE TO WATERWAYS

Mississippi Valley Association Shows Opening Up of New and Tremendous Resource Development.

TWO ACHIEVEMENTS
WELDED INTO ONE

Barge Channels "Second Bird With Same Stone" —Taxpayers Relieved of Improvement Costs.

Power sites and barge channels from a single work of engineering—"killing two birds with one stone"—opens a new and tremendous prospect in the development of river resources in the United States, as outlined in the semiannual report issued today by the Mississippi Valley Association.

The report, pointing out that sale of power sites may relieve taxpayers of the cost of the improvement for both power and transportation, reiterates the "new gospel of the waterways," expounded here last fall by Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce, and officially adopted by the association, which has the backing of 500 member organizations in 25 states.

"True conservation of water is not the prevention of use. Every drop of water that runs to the sea without yielding its full commercial returns to the nation is an economic loss, and that loss in all its economic implications can be computed in billions." Surveys of rivers "from Maine to California," to determine at once their potentialities in navigation, flood control and irrigation, power sites and power markets, were provided for in the $711,000,000 authorization bill for rivers and harbors passed in the last Congress.

People Are Awakened.
"The people of the United States are beginning to realize," the report states, "that, in the development of our navigable rivers as mediums for cheap transportation, the possibility of developing at the same time the hydro-electric power that is available on many of these streams is of equal importance to their use for navigation."

"The engineers have pointed out that, by building the necessary dams to provide for the successful navigation of many of these rivers, valuable power possibilities can be developed, the sale of which will cover the entire cost of making the rivers navigable without any expense to the people, and, in addition to the cheap transportation facilities these channels of commerce will afford, they will enjoy the manifold advantages which the cheap electrical power thus made available will bring to them."

More waterway legislation was obtained at the last congressional session than at any other, the report continues. The appropriations amounted to $133,000,000. In contrast, the report lists annual river and harbor appropriations, beginning with $12,000,000 in 1920 and $15,000,000 in 1921, and jumping to $42,000,000 in 1922. That was when James E. Smith, as president of the association, and Cleveland A. Newton in Congress—both of St. Louis—invaded Washington. In the campaign which has culminated in the administration's announced policy of completing all authorized waterways within five years.

Change in 10 Years.
"It is pleasant to meditate upon the change that has been brought about in the attitude of the public," the report comments. "Ten years ago there was little or no sentiment in Congress favorable to waterway development. In fact, there was a strong element against it, which had been built up by certain powerful interests which strongly opposed waterway development in the Mississippi Valley. It was almost impossible to pass appropriation bills providing for such development."

"The credit for the success achieved in this laborious work is largely due to Cleveland A. Newton of Missouri, who has been the acknowledged leader of the coterie of splendid, loyal men which were few in number to begin with, but which have grown in number, strength and influence until they now constitute a large majority of the congressional body at our National Capital. These, earnest, faithful workers deserve credit for a valuable service to their country."

"Let us note in passing—with very deep regret—that Mr. Newton has voluntarily retired from Congress to devote his entire time to his legal profession. His retirement from Congress is a great loss to the people of the whole country. He has rendered distinct and valuable service, which should never be forgotten. The people of the Mississippi Valley are fully conscious of the debt of gratitude they owe to Mr. Newton and they will always be grateful to him for the years of faithful, conscientious and valuable service which he has given so generously in their behalf."

Congressman Dyer Urges
Executive Clemency and Woman Prosecutor as Vigorously Opposes

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—The Attorney-General has sent direct telegraphic orders to Federal Marshal Meloy of Indianapolis that Nat Goldstein of St. Louis, who received a two-year sentence for his participation in the Jack Daniel whiskey distillery conspiracy, shall be taken to Leavenworth Penitentiary at once. This is taken here to mean that the efforts of Representative L. C. Dyer, who has asked executive clemency for Goldstein, have met with a serious setback.

Dyer has insisted that the Attorney-General and the President should review Goldstein's case. He is still waiting for the formal petition for pardon which Goldstein has made out. He had hoped to stay execution of the sentence at least until the Attorney-General had acted upon the plea for clemency.

If Goldstein is granted executive clemency, he will have Dyer to thank; if he is forced to serve the sentence, he will have Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, Assistant Attorney-General, to blame.

The fight is between two highly resourceful opponents. Dyer, who is going the limit for Goldstein, has taken the letters of petition for executive clemency direct to Attorney-General Sargent, who has promised a personal investigation. Mrs. Willebrandt, relying upon the court decisions against Goldstein, insists that she shall serve his sentence. She has protested to the Attorney-General against making an exception in his case.

Dyer is asking for clemency on two grounds, first, that Goldstein was convicted on insufficient evidence, and second, that Goldstein's health would be greatly impaired by his confinement.

First Supported by Brief.
He is supported in his first contention by a supplemental brief which Solicitor-General Mitchell filed when Goldstein asked for a review of his case by the United States Supreme Court. This brief, admitting that the evidence against Goldstein was "very meager," said in part:

"The point that Goldstein knows that improper influence was to be brought on the Collector of Internal Revenue (Arnold Helmlich, also convicted) to aid commission of the offense against the national prohibition act, is not directly and explicitly stated in the testimony, but is to be derived, if at all, only from inference drawn from the disclosed circumstances."

The Supreme Court refused to review the case. In his plea for clemency on the ground of ill-health, Dyer has submitted to the Attorney-General the reports of three physicians who examined Goldstein. These reports were rejected by Judge Baltzell, who ordered that Goldstein must serve his sentence.

Frequent Calls on Sargent.
Dyer has been a frequent visitor to the Attorney-General's office since Judge Baltzell's final orders. He saw Sargent on Friday and Saturday of last week, once on Monday and twice Tuesday. After the Saturday visit the Attorney-General promised that he would order another physical examination by Government physicians, but yesterday he said he had investigated the medical standing of the three non-Government physicians and had decided to use their reports.

Mrs. Willebrandt has protested against any recommendation by the Attorney-General to the President for executive clemency on either of the two points advanced by Dyer. In a conference with Sargent yesterday, she declared the Department of Justice should not seek to review the acts of the Federal courts. She pointed out that two courts, the District Court at Indianapolis and the Circuit Court of Appeals at Chicago, had passed sentence on Goldstein and his associates and that the Supreme Court had refused to review the case. She insisted that the Department of Justice should not go beyond their findings.

Regarding the ill-health plea, she declared Judge Baltzell was the proper person to decide upon this question. She told the Attorney-General that a competent Government physician would make a physical examination at Leavenworth, and if there were any danger to Goldstein, the physician would report the fact. As the matter now stands, the decision is up to Attorney-General Sargent, and he has given no indication either to Mrs. Willebrandt or Representative Dyer as to how he will act.

Mrs. Willebrandt is confident

Goldstein will go to the penitentiary; Dyer is equally confident he will save the former Circuit Clerk. Mrs. Willebrandt yesterday cited several precedents in her favor. Similar petitions for clemency on the grounds of ill health were advanced for former Gov. Warren T. McCray of Indiana, for whom Senator Watson and George Ade interceded; for former Congressman John W. Lingley of Kentucky and Charles Forbes and John W. Thompson, who were convicted in the Veterans' Bureau scandal. All these men had to serve their sentences, except Thompson, for whom death intervened.

Dyer insisted today that he was fighting a lone fight for Goldstein. He denied the report that Senator Watson of Indiana, had agreed to help Goldstein. Watson was in St. Louis about two weeks ago and refused to comment on his visit. Dyer insisted today that the visit had nothing to do with the Goldstein case as far as he knew. The fact that it was Dyer, and not some other Congressman, who interceded for Goldstein is expected to have some weight with the Attorney-General and the President. The Department of Justice has been known to yield to the influence of politics and the Goldstein case has rich possibilities.

During the trial and in the petition for clemency, much was made of the fact that Goldstein had been a Circuit Clerk in St. Louis and had once been nominated for Postmaster.

Dyer is the ranking member of the House Judiciary Committee which passes on the legislation the Department of Justice and the courts are most interested in. He is also the author of the antilynching bill which is said to make him a serious factor in handling of Southern delegates to Republican national conventions.

Three Government Witnesses Named Goldstein in Conspiracy.

THREE Government witnesses connected Goldstein with the conspiracy of politicians, Federal office holders, gangsters and fixers in which 30,000 gallons of whisky was illegally removed from the Jack Daniel warehouse here, under the guiding hand of George Remus, who then had a national reputation as "King of the Bootleggers."

These witnesses were Remus, Charles J. Schureman, Internal Revenue agent, and David Nolan, head of the Intelligence Unit of the Internal Revenue Department at Kansas City.

Remus testified he was introduced to Goldstein by Fred Essen, Republican boss of St. Louis County, in Goldstein's office, and that he subsequently told Goldstein he was negotiating to purchase the whisky in the Jack Daniel warehouse. Remus asked Goldstein concerning his relations with Arnold J. Helmlich, then Collector of Internal Revenue, and Goldstein, according to Remus, remarked that he had had Helmlich appointed collector and the latter would give any needed assistance. Later on Goldstein had Jack Kratz, now deceased, come to his office and meet

BLODGETT'S LOBBY AID NOT KNOWN TO CITY

Compensation Was Fixed at $5000, With Understanding
He Would Hire Help.

When the city Board of Estimate and Apportionment engaged former State Senator H. W. Blodgett, early this year, to act as the city's lobbyist in the Legislature, Blodgett said he would need to employ

The Rock Island's DeBaville Ave. Station (Forest Park), located in the heart of the residential and university district, is a real convenience. Fine morning and evening trains to and from Kansas City, Colorado and California, all stop at DeBaville Ave. Station—right at your door. A clean, comfortable trip through the Missouri Ozarks. an assistant. For this reason, his compensation was fixed at $5000, instead of the $3000 paid him for similar services at the 1925 session.

Now, with the legislative session nearly over, the Board of Estimate is not officially advised whether Blodgett has hired an assistant or not. There have been reports that Robert W. Otto, former Supreme Court judge, has been helping Blodgett, but these reports are not officially confirmed. Comptroller Nolte, when asked about the matter today, said he had heard Mayor Miller say that Otto might be available for work in the city's behalf at Jefferson City, but he had no knowledge that Otto had been employed. The compensation has all gone to Blodgett.

Otto, seen at Jefferson City, said he was not working with or under Blodgett, but that he had done some work on two or three legislative matters, for Mayor Miller. He would not say what the measures were.

Mayor Miller said he wrote to Otto, asking him to give what help he could on the city's rapid transit enabling measure. He said he also wrote Otto about other measures, but did not remember at the moment what they were.

"I don't know what arrangement Blodgett may have made," the Mayor said. "The understanding was that he should employ what help he might need, and pay for it from his $5000 fee." The city pays the lobbyist's expenses in addition to the $5000.

Blodgett would not comment.

Arm Amputated in Rail Accident.
Ray Kirby, 31 years old, of 1116 Mallinckrodt street, a switchman for the Terminal railroad, fell from a box car between two cars while switching in the General Motors Co. yards early today, suffering an amputation of the right arm and injuries to the right hip. He was taken to St. Mary's Infirmary in a serious condition.

SAYS GERMANS DIDN'T MAKE HELIUM OUT OF HYDROGEN
Princeton Professor Declares Faulty Apparatus Caused Apparent Result in Berlin.
PRINCETON, N. J., March 30.—Claims made last year by chemists of the University of Berlin that they had succeeded in transmuting hydrogen into helium were refuted yesterday by Prof. Hugh Scott Taylor, of the Department of Chemistry, of Princeton University.
Dr. Taylor announced that experiments conducted here by Bogra Kistiakowsky, national research fellow from the University of Berlin, proved that faulty apparatus used by the German scientists had caused the mistaken belief that a new means of producing helium at last had been found. He said Drs. Paneth and Peters of Berlin had been notified and it was understood that they would announce the discovery in the March issue of the German Journal of Chemistry.
Minute leakages of air into the experimental apparatus through some of the 20 stop cocks on it, and the use of asbestos to carry palladium into the presence of hydrogen produced helium, he said, but only such quantities as normally exist in asbestos and in the air which seeped through.
The Princeton apparatus which failed to produce helium, Dr. Taylor said, had only four stop cocks and each was sealed with mercury. No asbestos was used.

GOLDSTEIN MUST GO TO PRISON AT ONCE, ORDER SAYS

Remus. The latter testified, Kratz subsequently told Remus, when final arrangements were being made, that $12 a case would be deducted from the sale price of the whisky "to cover assistance given by the Internal Revenue Collector's office," and that he, Kratz, "would have to look after Mr. Goldstein."
During this conversation Remus made application to a surety company through Goldstein for a bond to indemnify owners of the warehouse against confiscation of their property in the event the law concerning removal of the whisky was violated. Goldstein was paid a commission on this bond. After that conversation Remus did not again come in contact with Goldstein, but arranged with Kratz to "fix" Hellmich. This was successfully accomplished, and the whisky was removed. Hellmich was convicted and has served his term in the penitentiary. He did not appeal the case and was paroled after serving one-third of the sentence.

Tells of Phone Call.
The second witness, Schureman, was a gauger at the warehouse. He testified he had known Goldstein many years and that Goldstein telephoned the warehouse one day and wanted to know if John Marcus was there. Marcus, a notorious gangster, who also was one of the convicted conspirators and who has served his term in the penitentiary, was not at the warehouse at the time.

When the Indianapolis grand jury began investigating the warehouse robbery, Collector Hellmich grew panicky and hastened to Indianapolis. He was questioned in the District Attorney's office by Nolan and others.

Hellmich, on that occasion, Nolan testified, said that Goldstein, some weeks prior to discovery of the robbery, telephoned, inquiring if it would be against his interests if a distillery in his district was robbed. Hellmich answered he did not want any of them robbed, according to Nolan, whereupon Goldstein answered, "All right, then, I will call the gang off."

Hellmich later visited Kratz on his deathbed and remarked that he was worried by the Jack Daniel robbery. Kratz said, "Don't let that worry you," according to Nolan's testimony. "Nat Goldstein, Mike Kinney and Mike Whalen will take care of that."

Kinney Granted New Trial.
Kratz referred to State Senator Michael Kinney and Michael J. Whalen, former member of the Democratic City Committee. Senator Kinney was convicted in this case and granted a new trial which has not been held. Whalen is serving his two-year sentence at Leavenworth.

Nolan's testimony was not allowed to stand as to Goldstein, because Goldstein was not present at Indianapolis when Hellmich talked, but the testimony was admitted as to Hellmich and thus got before the jury. Goldstein took the witness stand and denied he had had such a conversation with Hellmich. Hellmich did not testify.

On his appeal from the conviction at Indianapolis to the Circuit Court of Appeals at Chicago, the higher court held that the case, as to Goldstein, was made mainly, if not wholly, by Remus. Continuing, the opinion states: "As against Goldstein, it was not testified that he engaged in the act of carrying out of the conspiracy or that he received any profit therefrom. It appears he was an old-time practical politician and office-holder in St. Louis, wherein he might be useful to Remus in unlawful undertaking... This being so, his own innocent explanation of some of the suspicious circumstances, and the denial of others, and the evidence of character witnessed on his behalf would make it the function of the jury to decide where the truth lay as between conflicting evidence. In such situation, the judgment against him must stand."

Organ Concert at Cathedral.
Arthur Davis will give the first of a series of free weekly organ recitals tomorrow noon, from 12:30 o'clock to 1 on the new organ of Christ Church Cathedral, Thirtieth and Locust streets. The recital will follow the closing address of Bishop Johnson of Colorado, who will speak at noon.

BEGGAR ARRESTED, ADMITS SICK WIFE STORY IS FALSE
Frank Moore, 60, Used Fictitious Note From Doctor Declaring She Was an Invalid.
Detectives Ryan and Wardenki in a jewelry store at Eleventh street and Franklin avenue yesterday were approached by a beggar who handed them this note:

"This man's wife, Mrs. Charles C. Jones, has lung trouble and it is necessary to send her to Colorado for her health. If you can help raise necessary funds it will be a deserving act of charity." The note was signed, "Dr. Giller." The detectives arrested him. He said he was Frank Moore, 60 years old. He finally admitted, they reported, that he had no wife.

THE INTERNATIONAL

Whites Bar the Yellow Race
From Parks, Clubs and Trading as an Inferior

Since 1843 Traders Have Persisted
ing Chinese Law on Chinese Original Trouble Over Opium

ARTHUR E. BOSTWICK, librarian of the St. Louis Public Library, who made an extended stay in China two years ago, believes he knows the reasons why Americans and other foreigners are finding China a dangerous place now.

One reason of long standing in the treatment accorded to Chinese in the few bits of Chinese territory where the whites rule. This spirit of scorn for the Chinese is shown most thoroughly in the international district of Shanghai, with 40,000 European and American inhabitants.

"The international municipality at Shanghai is one of the sights of the world," Dr. Bostwick said. "The visitor knows that he is in China only by seeing so many Chinese in the streets, but the Chinese may not enter the parks, and no Chinese, however educated or cultured, may be taken into the Shanghai Club as a guest. If a distinguished Chinese were in St. Louis, he might be entertained in any of our clubs, but in Shanghai he could not enter the Shanghai Club."

Not a Model Settlement.
"The Chinese have no say about the government of this foreign municipality. It cannot be said that its foreign rulers have made it a model, for it is noted for other things than having one of the longest bars—110 feet—in the world. An old lady once remarked: 'If the Lord spares Shanghai much longer, I shall think Sodom and Gomorrah were treated very unfairly.'"

"Foreign handiers of Chinese merchandise, and others who live on the trade and the products of China, inhabit this quarter and the smaller foreign settlements in other cities. The British business people go so far as to refuse to deal with the heads of Chinese concerns, and employ compradors, as they are called, to carry on these dealings. The Americans and Germans did not hold themselves so aloof, and therefore have been liked better.

"This unsympathetic attitude toward the Chinese is what has made the trouble. The Chinese have been made to feel degraded in the eyes of the people who equals they consider themselves to be.

"We can imagine what our own people would do if they were treated as the Chinese have been treated. Suppose that Italy were stronger than this country and chose for some reason to send gunboats up the Mississippi to St. Louis. It might happen that Italian residents of this city would be badly handled. And if the boats began bombarding us, there would be still more danger for our Italian residents at the hands of our own people.

Analogy Not Far Fetched.
"It is not so different from our own country as some suppose. The population has elements like our own. There are the noble and high-minded, there are those who think only of money, there are the politicians of all grades, and the laboring class. Many of the poor are illiterate, rather than ignorant, and are easily swayed."

Gunboats and marines are necessary in China at the moment for protection of foreign residents. Dr. Bostwick thinks there is doubt whether American military and naval commanders have proceeded in the way best calculated to keep the friendship of the Chinese.

"If the foreign military and naval commanders had sought to get in touch with the Chinese Nationalist commanders at the outset," Dr. Bostwick said, "the Chinese would have liked it. They like to be helped, not bossed."

"The objection that we don't know whom to deal with is not a valid one any longer. The Nationalists are the people to deal with now, and it has been clear for some time that they control the future of China. There are left only Marshal Feng in Magnolia, who will probably join the Nationalist forces, and Gen. Chang Tso-Lin in Manchuria, with whom they will have to make some sort of terms.

Must Deal With Cantonese.
"So I believe that our military representatives should have got into close touch with the Cantonese Government, not giving official recognition, but showing sympathy and willingness to help the people; explaining that gunboats and marines might be necessary, but offering their co-operation in any way possible.

"As it is, we have tied up with the British and the Japanese, and thus have come in for hatred from the Chinese. Some of the British are pleased. They have blamed us, for treating the Chinese too well. They know better how to do it—stand up and tell them what they're doing. But now the British say, we have gone in with them."

THE INTERNATIONAL SETTLEMENT AT SHANGHAI AND WHY THE CHINESE HATE IT

Whites Bar the Yellow Race From Parks, Clubs and Direct Trading as an Inferior People

Since 1843 Traders Have Persisted in Violating Chinese Law on Chinese Soil—
Original Trouble Over Opium Traffic.

ARTHUR E. BOSTWICK, librarian of the St. Louis Public Library, who made an extended stay in China two years ago, believes he knows the reasons why Americans and other foreigners are finding China a dangerous place now.

One reason of long standing is the treatment accorded to Chinese in the bits of Chinese territory where the whites rule. This spirit of scorn for the Chinese is shown most thoroughly in the international district of Shanghai, with 40,000 European and American inhabitants.

"The international municipality at Shanghai is one of the sights of the world," Dr. Bostwick said. "The visitor knows that he is in China only by seeing so many Chinese in the streets, but the Chinese may not enter the parks, and no Chinese, however educated or cultured, may be taken into the Shanghai Club as a guest. If a distinguished Chinese were in St. Louis, he might be entertained in any of our clubs, but in Shanghai he could not enter the Shanghai Club."

Not a Model Settlement.

"The Chinese have no say about the government of this foreign municipality. It cannot be said that its foreign rulers have made it a model, for it is noted for other things than having one of the longest bars—110 feet—in the world. An old lady once remarked, 'If the Lord spares Shanghai much longer, I shall think Sodom and Gomorrah were treated very unfairly.'"

"Foreign handlers of Chinese merchandise, and others who live on the trade and the products of the smaller foreign settlements in other cities, the British business people go so far as to refuse to deal with the heads of Chinese concerns, and employ compradors, as they are called, to carry on these dealings. The American and German do not hold themselves so aloof, and therefore have been liked better."

"This unsympathetic attitude toward the Chinese is what has made the trouble. The Chinese have been made to feel degraded in the eyes of the people whose equals they consider themselves to be."

"We can imagine what our own people would do if they were treated as the Chinese have been treated. Suppose that Italy were stronger than this country and chose for some reason to send gunboats up the Mississippi to St. Louis. It might happen that Italian residents of this city would be badly handled. And if the boats began bombarding us, there would be still more danger for our Italian residents at the hands of our own people."

Analogy Not Far Fetched.

"It is not so different from our own country as some suppose. The population has elements like our own. There are the noble and high-minded, there are those who think only of money, there are the politicians of all grades, and the laboring class. Many of the poor are illiterate, rather than ignorant, and are easily swayed."

Gunboats and a navy are necessary in China at the moment for protection of foreign residents, Dr. Bostwick thinks, but he doubts whether American military and naval commanders have proceeded in the way best calculated to keep the friendship of the Chinese.

"If the foreign military and naval commanders had sought to get in touch with the Chinese Nationalist commanders at the outset," Dr. Bostwick said, "the Chinese would have liked it. They like to be helped, not bossed."

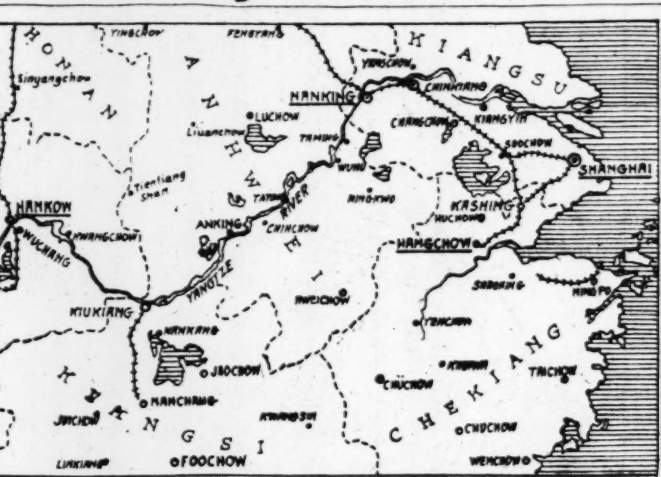

"The objection that 'we don't know whom to deal with' is not a valid one any longer. The Nationalists are the people to deal with now. It has been clear for some time that they control the future of China. There are left only Marshal Feng in Magnolia, who will probably join the Nationalist forces, and Gen. Chang Tso-lin in Manchuria, with whom they will have to make some terms."

Must Deal With Cantonese.

"So I believe that our military, and even our diplomatic, representatives should have got into close touch with the Cantonese Government, not giving official recognition, but showing sympathy and willingness to help the people; explaining that gunboats and marines might be necessary, but offering their co-operation in any way possible."

"As far as we have tied up with the British and the Japanese, and thus have come in for hatred from the Chinese. Some of the British are pleased. They have blamed them for treating the Chinese too well. They know better how to do it—stand up and tell them what 'you educated them' the British say, and now look what they're doing. But now, the British say, we have gone in with them,

Zone of Foreign Evacuations in China

FOREIGN missionaries and consular forces are being withdrawn from virtually all of the Yangtze River Valley towns and cities shown on this map. The chief movement has been from Nanking to Shanghai, though alarming reports in the last few days of the prospective Cantonese advance through the Province of Shantung have caused preparatory measures to be taken as far north as Peking.

Its influence in China, and has been successful, but I do not anticipate that Communism will make much headway in China. The Chinese are too intensely individualistic to take to such a theory. It is possible that the Chinese might organize their government on some thing like the soviet plan, but a communist state is very unlikely.

"As I read our newspapers," remarked Dr. Bostwick, "I find statements which, if I had not visited China, might make me think of the people there as barbarians. The word 'native' a word which we would not use in speaking of occurrences in France or Italy. It has a sound of inferiority."

Even the poorer Chinese people are in many cases intelligent, and make up for lack of education by the lack of literacy. Some coolies I have met were very bright. The lower class is not, as in our land, largely foreign, but is of the same race as the more advanced classes, and there is a decided tendency toward members of the different classes which is sometimes surprising."

In his travels in China, which he visited as representative of the American Library Association, Dr. Bostwick times as little time as possible in the foreign sections of Shanghai and other cities, and saw as much as he could of the Chinese people of all classes. In an article published in the Post-Dispatch of Aug. 2, 1925, he told of his own feeling in China, and predicted that the Chinese would soon seek to end foreign concessions and extra-territorial rights.

Shanghai One of Five Ports Forced Open by Opium War

THE international settlement at Shanghai, where foreigners from all parts of the Yangtze River Valley are being concentrated for protection against the rising tide of Chinese Nationalism, has had an official status since 1843. In that year the British Government, by force of arms, compelled the Chinese Government to open five ports to British and world trade. The ports were Canton, Amoy, Fuchow, Ningpo and Shanghai. China extended to Great Britain extraterritorial rights on land near each of these cities and Britain paid rent.

In 1843, despite its position at the mouth of the Yangtze, Shanghai did not amount to much. The great centers of the region being Hangchow, 100 miles to the south, and Soochow, 50 miles to the west. But the French came to Shanghai in 1849, and Americans later, and foreign enterprise developed the first port of China, one through which passed 65 per cent of all Chinese trade, and one of the first five ports of the entire world.

The city, with its 10 miles of 24-foot wall, is at the confluence of the Hwangpu and Woon-sung rivers, 12 miles south of the Yangtze. The Hwangpu flows north into the Yangtze.

British North of Old City.

The British concession lies on the west bank of the Hwangpu. The French are partly between the British and the Chinese city to the westward. The Americans are farthest removed from old Shanghai, being north across Soochow Creek from the British.

The French occupy 5884 acres, or about 8 2/3 square miles, and the population of the international settlement as 20,000, preponderantly Japanese, with 1,500,000 Chinese in old Shanghai, but the British Foreign Secretary, Sir Austen Chamberlain, recently put the total in the foreign quarter at 322,831. The assessed land valuation is $42,196,262 (about 204,653,000).

Within this territory consular courts have jurisdiction. Chinese law does not hold. Offenders are taken before the consuls of their own country for judgment according to the laws of their own land. The Chinese authorities have no power even over Chinese in alien employment.

The international settlement has two municipal administrations, the one for the British and the other for the French. The climate is temperate. Tea, WASHINGTON, March 31.—Formation of a National Citizens' Committee on Relations with Latin America, under the honorary presidency of Senator George W. Norris, Independent Republican, of Nebraska, was announced here today by John F. Moors of Boston, who has been selected active president.

Asserting that the present policy of the United States in dealing with Latin-American countries, as manifested in Nicaragua, Mexico and elsewhere, is a violation of every sound American tradition and is causing the loss of great Latin-American markets, Moors said the committee would stand for the following four fundamental principles in the conduct of Latin-American relations:

1. A square deal for all republics of the Americas—for the least, as well as the greatest.

2. Settlement of controversies, not by force or coercion, but by arbitration, in accordance with the policy specifically endorsed by the United States in its adherence to the Hague convention 20 years ago.

3. Preservation and promotion of legitimate business by the restoration and development of friendly relations to these countries.

4. Noninterference in government and internal affairs of our Latin-American neighbors.

"This is a program upon which Americans of every creed and party can unite," the announcement said. The committee's first efforts will be directed toward forming local organizations interested in restoring the good will and friendly relations which have been sacrificed by a misguided and blundering policy of dollar diplomacy, the announcement continued.

Organizing the committee, which has already arisen spontaneously in Massachusetts and other states, it was announced.

MEXICAN REBELS DEFEATED

MEXICO CITY, March 31.—The Vidales brothers, who for months have been leading rebel bands in the State of Guerrero, were defeated by Federal forces under Gen. Claudio Fox and one of them, Baldomero, died a few days later from his wounds. His body was buried by Gen. Fox after it had been identified. The band leader, Amadeo Vidales, was exterminated and the leader is hiding in the mountains with three of his followers.

Dispatches from Guadalajara report that 16 rebels were killed, among them the leader, Anastasio, in two combats with Federal forces at Autlan and Santa Ana, State of Jalisco, yesterday. The rebels were dispersed and the troops are pursuing them. Seven rebels were killed at Mat Paso, in a fight with Federal forces led by Gen. Lazo. This officer reports the arrest of a Catholic priest, Manuel Mercado, on the charge of engaging in seditious activities.

CITY ADMINISTRATION URGES PASSAGE OF 7 AMENDMENTS TO ST. LOUIS CHARTER TUESDAY

Declares Their Purpose Is to Speed Up Street
Improvements and Cut Cost—Summary of Each Proposed Change.

City officers, at a meeting late yesterday in Mayor Miller's office, decided to campaign for the passage of the seven amendments to the city charter to be voted upon at next Tuesday's election. Speakers will address movie theater audiences and other public gatherings, explaining the purpose of the amendments.

Mayor Miller's administration has sponsored the amendments, as setting that if passed they will speed up the improvement of streets, sidewalks and alleys and will reduce the cost of such work in some instances as much as 15 per cent.

The amendments range in number from three to nine, beginning at three on the ballot because at a previous election numbers 1 and 2 were voted upon. These provided salary increases for the president and members of the Board of Aldermen and were defeated.

Amendment No. 3.

A summary of Amendment No. 3 follows:

Amendment of Section 20 of Article 4 of the Charter of the City of St. Louis providing that any ordinance authorizing public work or improvements, or repairs thereof, or establishing a benefit or taxing district, or joint sewer district, shall be an emergency measure.

Under the old section of the city charter one month was allowed after the final passage of a street improvement ordinance for the special taxpayers to file petition for a referendum. An attorney familiar with street improvement work yesterday criticized Amendment No. 3 on the ground that to make such ordinances emergency measures blocked any chance of a referendum. When this objection was reported to City Engineer Horner he agreed that the amendment did away with the referendum but explained: "There never has been a referendum on the laying of a street or an alley. The people of St. Louis would never think of voting on so trivial a matter."

Amendment No. 3 is a time-saving measure, Horner said, designed to eliminate the month's delay pending referendum action.

Amendment No. 4.

The summary of Amendment No. 4 reads as follows:

Amendment of Section 1 of Article 17 of the Charter of the City of St. Louis, providing that bonds may be issued for the establishment of a revolving fund to be used in payment of local improvements, and to be replenished from the proceeds of special tax assessments.

In explanation of this measure Engineer Horner said it was designed to save the taxpayers as much as 15 per cent of the cost of street and alley construction work by providing funds with which to pay contractors as soon as they finished their work. Under the old section of the city charter contractors are paid with special tax bills, which frequently they must discount at 85, sometimes more, sometimes less, at banks, in order to finance their work.

It is Horner's contention that the cost of this financing is added to the contractors' bids and the taxpayers suffer. Horner also pointed out that if city street and alley work is placed on a cash basis it will attract more competition among contractors, as now many smaller contractors are unable to finance projects on a tax bill basis.

On the Other Hand.

A lawyer critic of amendment No. 4 argued that it would make the city responsible for the collection of tax bills and would save the contractor attorneys' fees and protect him at the city's expense. He pointed out that the new revolving fund of $200,000 necessary to finance the measure would cost the city at least $135,000 a year in interest. Moreover, the critic argued, contractors very seldom charge as much as 15 per cent for financing fees and under the new amendment would not be forced to deduct 15 per cent arbitrarily from their bids. The lawyer did not believe the city would save as much as $135,000 a year by paying contractors in cash.

When apprised of these objections Horner conceded that under the amendment proposed the city would take full responsibility for collecting tax bills and in case of a dispute or litigation after work was completed the contractor would have his cash and be out. But this amendment, Horner contended, "would only obligate the city legally to do what it already does."

The Other Amendments.

No opposition has been developed to amendments 6, 7, 8 and 9.

Amendment No. 6 provides a return to the street improvement assessment ratio in force before the new city charter was passed in 1911. At present one-half the cost of the street or alley improvements is assessed against abutting property owners and two-thirds against the benefited tax district. Amendment No. 6 would change this to one-fourth against owners of abutting property and three-fourths against the benefited tax district.

Amendment No. 7 provides for the same change as relating to alley construction. Amendment No. 8 provides that the cost of improving the sidewalks, the cost of grading sidewalks, and that part of the cost of sidewalks may be assessed against abutting property owners and paid by the city.

Amendment No. 9 provides that private persons who improve public highways under license shall not receive credit on special tax bills for such improvements and that the city may make use of such improvements without giving credit to the private makers.

Texas Guilt Not in Contempt.

NEW YORK, March 31.—Texas Guilt, light club hostess, was freed yesterday of charges of contempt of court for violating the Federal prohibition law. The case against the hostess and Herman Edison was dismissed by Federal Judge Thatcher after Miss Guilt had testified she "certainly did not" order a waiter in her club to serve liquor to a customer after the club had been served with a temporary injunction.

HAS BACKING OF MANY UTILITIES

Representatives of Eastern Financiers as Well as of United Railways Among Those Urging Measure.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 31.—Public utility interests of the State and big Eastern financial interests controlling utilities, including the North American Co., the Studebaker Organization and others, endorsed a setback yesterday in their efforts to obtain a perpetual franchise law for Missouri. The Senate Judiciary Committee, of which Senator Casey of Kansas City is chairman, reported the bill favorably, but only after adopting amendments making it inapplicable to utilities in St. Louis and Kansas City.

As the measure will go to the Senate it would be accompanied by amendments limiting its application to the State outside of the two large cities.

Its effect, if passed, would be to make much more valuable the utilities properties in the State through the fact that it would give them perpetual franchises instead of the 20-year franchises, under which they now operate, and many of which are near expiration. Perpetual franchises would make financing easier and cheaper. They also would make the utilities more attractive to the Eastern interests, which are gradually extending their holdings throughout the State by the purchase of small plants.

Provision was made for the purchase of the utilities by municipalities at any time desired by the municipality, the price, if the buyer and seller were unable to agree, to be fixed by the Public Service Commission.

The measure had been considered of particular importance and had attracted to Jefferson City during the legislative session, generally, former State Senator Frank McDavid of Springfield; Wallace Fry of Mexico; I. R. Kelso of St. Louis and Zack Patterson of Kansas City.

They represented the North American, the Studebaker, the Missouri Utilities Co., and individual utilities.

Arguments for Measure.

The arguments advanced to the committee were that the perpetual franchise or terminable franchise, as they preferred to term, would be of benefit to the public in that to provide the utilities with easier and cheaper money would mean decreased cost of operation, which might be expected to be reflected in lower rates.

They cited cases of absorption of small and rundown utilities which had been taken over by larger interests, built better rates lowered. Casey's opposition, which was the principal stumbling block met by the promoters of the legislation, was due to the influence of City Manager McElroy of Kansas City.

$3,000,000 WATERWORKS
BONDS BRING RECORD PRICE
Syndicate Pays Above Par and Brings Total Under New
Issue to $30,125,000.

Three million dollars' worth of waterworks bonds, bearing 4 1/2 per cent interest, were sold today by a syndicate for $2,024,786, or 100.862 per cent of par, the highest price ever received by the city for bonds of this type. The bonds were yielding as low as 4 1/4 per cent.

The transaction brought the total of bonds sold under the $37,000,000 bond issue to $30,125,000, of which $20,125,000 was for municipal improvements and $10,000,000 for waterworks.

The syndicate consisted of the Liberty Central Trust Co., George H. Burr & Co., A. D. Leach & Co., Chase Securities Corporation, B. S. Van Ingen & Co., H. L. Allen & Co., and Hatchelder, Wack & Co. All except the Liberty Central Bank are New York investment houses. Five bids were received, all above par, and the bonds were sold to the highest bidder.

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles, that it will always fight for progress or reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, and that it will sympathize with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news; always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

The Foreign Debt Debate.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

SIR GEORGE PAISH does not understand American psychology. In his recent debate on the foreign debts his argument dealt with economics, a subject of no appeal to the body of the people. His opponent, Mr. Burton, merely had to make a display of rhetoric with the old caustical points.

Point 1—Cancellation would mean impairment of national morale and sanctity of contract. This is a hypocritical plea that escaped even the genius of Shakespeare as he portrayed Shylock, nor did it occur to our Government when it permitted the Boxer indemnity of China.

Point 2—More casuistry. He shakes a dreadful finger as he announces that cancellation would throw the burden of payment, not on the Treasury but on that sacred and inviolable figure, the taxpayer, just as if all Government revenues and expenditures did not originally proceed from the people's pockets. The only way to get money without taxation is to issue fiat currency and even this is ultimately shouldered by the taxpayer.

Point 3—Looking towards Europe the Debt Commission, of which Mr. Burton was a member, assert that they have been very generous in settlement; looking towards Congress they assert that their demands have been in accordance with "capacity to pay." In other words, their exactions stopped just short of the bankruptcy of the debtors. Take your choice of this Janus-faced pronouncement.

There is only one effective appeal to the American heart as regards cancellation. We must explain to the people that for three years we profligate at Europe's expense till her pockets were empty; that we then declared war and in effect said to the Allies: "We now recognize you as associates but are not prepared to fight for an indefinite time. During that time we expect you to go on fighting and to hold the lines no matter at what cost of life. We refuse to follow many examples and give money in lieu of soldiers. We refuse to even loan you cash but we will sell you supplies at our own expense and take no note, if the security is good, at 5 per cent interest." For 34 months we did not contribute either a soldier or a dollar to the battle line which the Allies were holding for us and for them at a sacrifice of hundreds of thousands of their youth. They hold no note of ours to show for this, but they can point to the crosses in their cemeteries.

Serialization of "Ulysses."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I READ with greatest satisfaction your editorial in the issue of March 21 on "International Copyright" and wish to say that you deserve the thanks of all decent readers of serious writings.

However, you can do your readers a further service by giving publicity to the fact that "Two Worlds Monthly" is not publishing James Joyce's "Ulysses," but an edited and expurgated form of this famous and almost mythical work. Persons who are uninformed may think that in buying Roth's magazine they will be getting this greatest and most original piece of writing that our age has produced in the original form. Fortunately (so unfortunately), Roth does not circulate the original text of "Ulysses" and keep out of jail. This on account of senseless censorship laws and the perniciousness of officialdom. Roth leaves it always to be inferred that his serialization is the authentic text. It is not.

Reviewing Worth While Books.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE best paragraph in Mr. Arthur Strawn's article in the April Mercury is the few lines he devotes to our Post-Dispatch, even if he does not like the art and literature column. It is true we think the city makes no demand for it, but we are consoled in the fact that the column will review at least books that may be barred by the Puritans in Boston.

Swimming Pool for Forest Park.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

ST. LOUIS can be justly proud of Forest Park. Visitors from other cities praise it, and are considerably impressed with our zoo, which is second to none in America. They laud our wonderful open-air Municipal Theater, also the numerous recreational facilities, all of which have made Forest Park one of "the" parks in the country.

But we are overlooking another good proposition for Forest Park, and that is a mammoth open-air swimming pool, which could be beautiful. In other words, create a miniature Lake Michigan, with an artificial sand beach. With such an important addition Forest Park would indeed be a complete playground.

"BUD" WILNER.

TWO SERVICES FOR ST. LOUIS.

The confirmation of the appointment of Col. Orrick to the St. Louis Police Board is confidently predicted by State Senate leaders who have canvassed the Senate. In that event a decided victory will be won by sound public sentiment for law enforcement and an honest administration of the Police Department.

Senators, both Democratic and Republican, undoubtedly were deceived when they were induced to vote against Orrick's confirmation when he was first nominated. They were misled by the plea of senatorial courtesy and other pleas to consummate a deliberate conspiracy to oust from office a President of the Police Board who had proved himself to be unapproachable for the packing of the police force with political spoilsmen and for easing up on the enforcement of law against the lawless elements of the city.

The protest of citizens and the rejoicing of partisan spoilsmen and the lawless element over the Orrick rejection enlightened the Senators, who did not intend by their vote to strike down honesty and efficiency in police management and to set up spoils control for a political machine, for the benefit of law breakers.

The reported change of mind reflects credit on the majority of the State Senate. The confirmation of Col. Orrick's appointment is one good service for St. Louis which the Senate can perform before adjournment.

There is another service which the Senate and House can combine in doing for St. Louis people. They can pass the rapid transit enabling act, in its original form or with the amendments suggested by St. Louis representatives.

The bill concerns St. Louis alone. It will enable the city to begin the long and arduous task of planning and constructing subways and a revised urban transportation system. The hands of St. Louis are tied without an enabling act. Failure of the Legislature to pass this bill will tie the hands of the city for two years.

There are protests against the bill on the ground that the assessment provision is unconstitutional. That question can be settled after the bill is adopted. Every element interested in the act will have its day of hearing. The people of St. Louis will be the final arbiters in any decision that is reached.

Surely neither the Senate nor the House of the State Legislature wants to hamper St. Louis in its preparation for future growth and needs.

MORE, NOT FEWER, CRUISERS NEEDED.

Mr. Coolidge, who is proposing a conference among the Powers to limit cruisers and other naval auxiliaries, is going counter to the opinions of many of our naval experts. The heavy demands for naval units in Nicaraguan and Chinese waters have emphasized the need for more cruisers if the far-flung activities of our State Department are to continue. Great Britain, which has been in the business of imperialism for a long time and knows what is needed, has many more cruisers than we have. Use of our battleship fleet in distant waters is barred for two reasons. 1. It is our policy to keep that fleet close to the Atlantic and Pacific shores. 2. A battleship is too large to do such duty as our cruisers are now doing on the Yangtze.

As we have pointed out before, however, Mr. Coolidge's parley may have far different results from the one he presumably had in mind, namely, a diminution in the number of cruisers possessed by the various Powers. After we talk the question over with Great Britain and Japan, having fresh in mind the drain on our auxiliary craft caused by Nicaraguan and Chinese matters, we may decide to build up to a parity with Great Britain. This would be a curious turn to a movement which was intended to supplement the capital ship limitation agreed upon in the Washington Arms Conference of 1921, yet he is a credulous person who thinks that Great Britain will ever consent to thin its cruiser strength to our present proportions.

However high Mr. Coolidge's motives were in proposing the conference, he neglected to take into account practical necessities. Our State Department has taken on the duties of an international policeman and this work requires vehicles. It is all right to speak in noble terms of disarmament, but it doesn't mean anything in the face of present world conditions. The disarmament parley of Mr. Coolidge is likely to end up in a big navy program.

OUR CHANGING MONROE DOCTRINE.

Speaking recently before a New York audience, Dr. James Wilford Garner, professor of political science in the University of Illinois, declared that the Monroe Doctrine "is being invoked to promote dollar diplomacy for commercial exploitation by North Americans."

This is only another way of saying, as Prof. Moon and Walter Lippmann have lately pointed out, that the Monroe Doctrine has been so perverted from its original meaning that it is today being interpreted quite differently from the way in which Monroe contemplated.

The Monroe Doctrine of 1823 protected Latin America directly, and the United States indirectly, by preventing further colonization in the former quarter by European Powers. But it did not prevent their intervention in Latin America in order to protect their nationals at a time of revolution or some other catastrophic occurrence.

This conception of the Doctrine lasted until Roosevelt took the United States to Panama. Then, faced with the advisability of preventing great foreign Powers from policing the territory adjacent to the canal, Roosevelt, in his message of 1904, set up a new conception. By this we were obliged to act as the sole police power in the Caribbean, in order that other Powers would not do so in the interests of their nationals. Thus we obtained a new Monroe Doctrine, and one that was surely a far cry from that of Monroe.

Now the Doctrine seems likely to be interpreted in still another way. Just as Roosevelt took us to Panama and declared we had a duty to police the Caribbean, Coolidge has taken us to Nicaragua and made the contention that the vested interests of our nationals in Mexico and other parts of Latin America are immutable. The State Department, under this new policy, acts as both attorney for our investors in Latin America and final court of review.

According to this emerging interpretation, therefore, the Monroe Doctrine, once a purely defensive policy, is to be a doctrine of extra-territoriality very like that one which is vanishing before the assault of the outraged masses of China.

THE LETTER TO AL SMITH.

Two conclusions are inescapable from a careful reading of "An Open Letter to the Honorable Alfred E. Smith," which appears in the April Atlantic Monthly, and in which Charles C. Marshall, a New York lawyer and member of the Anglican Church, asks the popular contender for the Democratic presidential nomination to make plain his attitude on certain phases of the relationship of the Catholic Church to the State.

The first is that the article, while possibly not so intended by its author, will serve to muddy the waters of religious tolerance, which have been gradually clearing up with the dying out of the Klan. It is a subtle attack not only upon Catholicism but upon Catholics in public office, despite scores of examples of splendid service in the highest offices, from Supreme Court Judges down. Catholics will inevitably resent having a prominent member of their church questioned as to the possibility that his religious faith may render him unfaithful to the Constitution and laws of his country.

As further ground for resentment, Catholics can point to the fact that no Protestant candidate is ever subjected to such questioning, even though the church to which he belongs may be extensively engaged in politics in an endeavor to enact some favorite nostrum—prohibition or anti-evolution, for example—into law.

The second conclusion is that the article will not occasion the clearing up of any of the questions which it poses, for the reason that no formal reply by Gov. Smith will satisfy Mr. Marshall and others like him. The Governor's only possible formal reply—the only possible reply, in fact, of any religious person who had been asked his conception of the relationship which should exist between his church and the State—would be that, while he considered his church supreme in spiritual affairs, he thought the State supreme in civil affairs. This answer would imply that he would faithfully obey his oath of office to support the Constitution and the laws of his country. It is the answer Catholics have always given when questioned about this matter, but, despite its obvious honesty, it has appeared not to meet with the satisfaction of persons like Mr. Marshall, just as it has certainly not met with the approval of persons like Emperor Evans of Atlanta.

Gov. Smith's whole public career is an answer to Mr. Marshall's question. He is honest and capable. He has been faithful to public trust and to the Constitution and laws. In civil and official life, regardless of his religious faith, he has served the people. That is sufficient answer for the sincere man. It is a piece of impudence to ask a man of his public record to answer such a question. It is a denial of religious freedom.

A DAYLIGHT SAVING REFERENDUM.

The movement for daylight saving by ordinance has been abandoned. The question is to be submitted to popular vote at the next regular election in November, 1928.

This is the judgment of the committee in charge of the proposal. It is a sound judgment, we believe. There is assertive opposition to the change. How extensive it is can only be surmised. Under the circumstances the Board of Aldermen could not fairly be asked to make the decision. The people of St. Louis should make it.

Meantime, the Daylight Saving Committee will be active. It purposes to canvass the cities that have moved up the clock and learn what the people of those cities think about it. Those facts will be given to the people of St. Louis in next year's campaign. Then if the majority vote for it we shall have daylight saving, and if they don't we won't. Fair enough.

Flint Rhem, who won 20 games for the Cardinals last season, is offered $375 per game to pitch 20 more victories this year. Flint wants $750 per victory, which seems fair when you think of what some of the games will cost when Flint isn't pitching.

THE DOWNFALL OF MUSSOLINI.

Though the press has failed to record the momentous news in the flaring headlines it deserves, the Italian dictator has actually met his Waterloo. He has been tripped up, and by a matter which seems, in comparison with the great affairs of state with which he is accustomed to deal, like a pebble beside an Alp.

It all came about in this way. The Italian people wanted something to argue over. They couldn't, of course, argue over politics, because just now there is, strictly speaking, no politics in Italy. There is just Mussolini. So they had to hunt around for something frivolous and innocuous enough not to attract the opprobrium of the all-wise and ever-vigilant Duce. And after considerable searching, one of the most influential papers of Rome found such a topic for disputation. It proposed the question: Should Italian women be plump or thin?

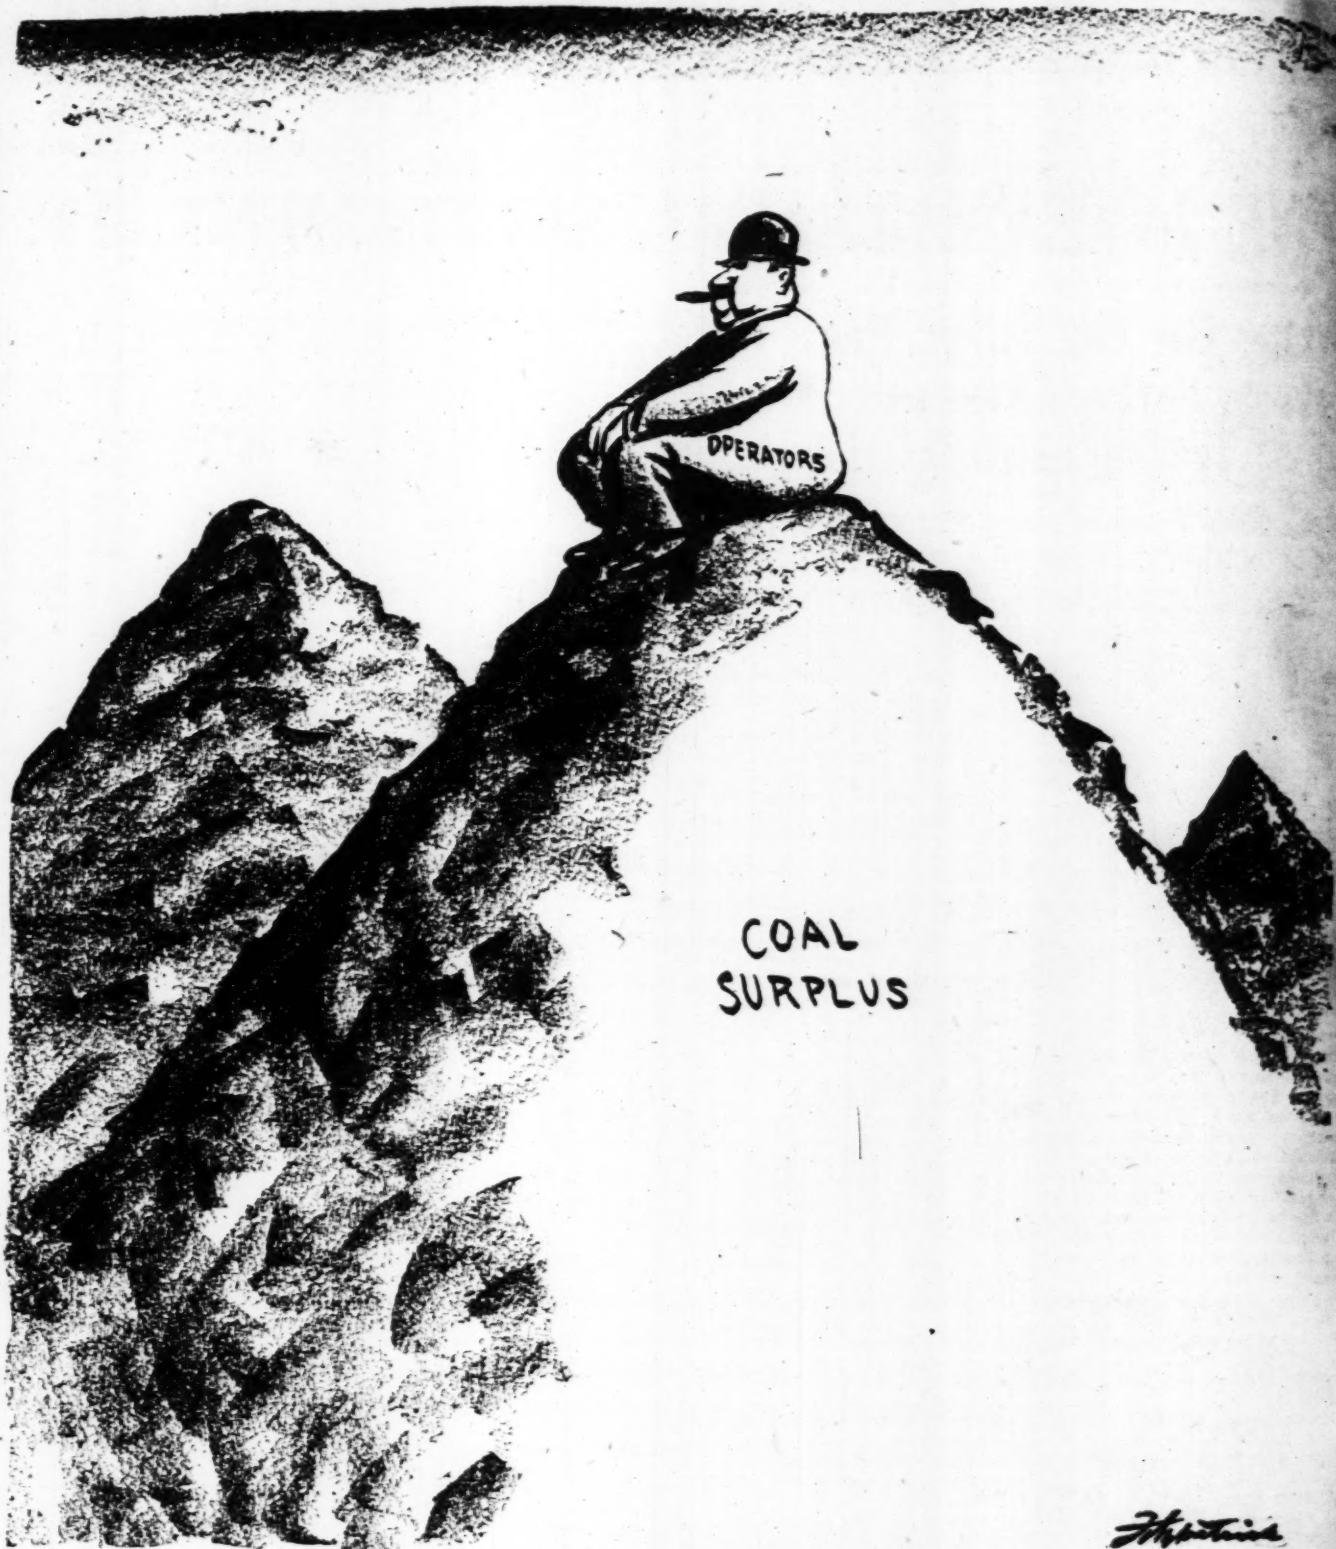

This was, to be sure, a much greater question than it appears. Stated as it should be, it was the question of whether woman's form should conform to the plump ideal conceived of by the great painters of Italy's past or to the slim model dictated by the modistes of contemporary France. It was, that is, fundamentally a patriotic question of the first water. Therefore, when the disputants got into a deadlock they turned to the one national figure who seems to think that patriotism is the highest quality of mankind—they turned to Il Duce. And then they met disappointment. Mussolini, in this hour of trial, flunked out.

No wonder. Have Italians forgotten about the case of one Calus Julius Caesar, who almost lost a great battle because of one famous woman of his day? And have they lost all remembrance of the case of another ruler, who, because of this same woman, turned his career as a ruler into such a gorgeous and spectacular fiasco that he has been portrayed by playwrights from Shakespeare to Shaw?

It would be hard to say where the biggest mess is at the present moment—but if it is not in China it is at the Delmar-Wabash crossing.

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

KANSAS CITY'S BIG SENSATION.

From the Nation.

ELMER GENTRY has been banned from the Kansas City Public Library.

which is not surprising in view of the fact that somehow the ministers of Kansas City, who trustfully junched with Mr. Lewis every Wednesday and poured out their souls and creeds to his friendly ears, never suspected his fell purpose in questioning them. Now that the world knows all about it, they are properly shocked and surprised. Professor William Lyon Phelps of Yale is quoted as saying that there never was a minister like Elmer Gentry. "I know something of Baptist ministers. My grandfather and father were added attractions Big Avenue Temple and there has been a constant string of Baptist ministers walking through my house for years, and I have never known one like Elmer Gentry." Nobody doubts for a minute that this statement is true. But in order to keep Elmer Gentry, the character in fiction, quite separate and distinct from his brothers in life, the ministers in Kansas City ought to be careful not to copy Mr. Lewis' style of writing. Harcourt, Brace & Co. quote advertisements from Kansas City papers last Sunday: "Sinclair Lewis' Vice Preacher Book" this in bold black type. As an added attraction Big Avenue Temple offered "Bob White—Big Bass in Ronald Ashburn—Little Boy Soprano." Elmer Gentry was drunk! Was the headline of the announcement of the Linwood Methodist Church. How closely Mr. Lewis caught Kansas City's voice can be judged by Dr. Harcourt's "Lenten Suggestions." "The old-time church that both our morning and evening congregations are record-breaking. There must be a real reason for this. Wonder if it isn't to be found in the fact, not only of a growing city, but of a growing church in the heart of this growing city."

ONE OF THE NEW REPUBLICS.

From the Philadelphia Inquirer.

LATVIA, one of the new Baltic republics now independent of Russia, comes seldom into the news. The death of the president, Jan Tschakert, elected when the new state was organized, and re-elected in 1925, called attention to the ordered progress a people so long under foreign rule have made. Much of this is due to the ability and experience of Mr. Tschakert. He was a barrister by profession, and at one time editor of a newspaper; he held a place in various Russian government committees, and was a member of the first duma. The successful working of the Latvian constitution, despite the large number of political parties, must be credited in part to his moderation and good sense. Independence of Russia was long a dream of the Letts. In the fourteenth century they fought the Germans, but were finally included in the federal republic created by the Teutonic order. Eventually Latvia was annexed by Poland. At the first partition of Poland Latvia was given to Russia. But her people never regarded themselves as Russians. The Car was in their eyes. Duke of Latvia, and nothing more. It was inevitable that with the upheaval of the Russian revolution they should strike for national independence. Latvia has a population of nearly 2,000,000. It is mainly an agricultural country, though industry has been making rapid strides of late. With the possession of the important Baltic port of Riga, there should be great prosperity in store for the new nation. The soviet government has cast an envious eye in that direction; but so far the Letts have maintained their national identity.

RADIO POSSIBILITIES.

From the Indianapolis News.

ANY estimate of the number of persons who heard President Coolidge's Washington birthday speech through radio receivers can be no more than conjecture, but some experts believe that at least 20,000,000 persons listened in. If this be true, the President addressed the largest assemblage in the history of the world. That he or any other man could make his voice heard by every man, woman and child in America is now a possibility. The latest estimate of the number of radio receiving sets in use is between 5,000,000 and 6,000,000. It would be possible now, despite the improbability of the suggestion, for every person in the United States to listen to one voice broadcast through bookies. This would mean no more than about 20 to 25 persons listening at each radio instrument. Another method would be to use amplifiers, making it easy for a crowd of 5000 persons in a hall or in the open air to hear what was being received through one set. When the telephone was no older than the radio is now, it gave much less satisfactory results. Improvements are being made from month to month, and the time may come when static will be conquered and satisfactory reception assured under any conditions. Engineers predict that the television apparatus will be widely used. It would permit a person at a receiving set to see the broadcaster, President Coolidge, while speaking, as well as in all parts of this country. More than 20 stations in America broadcast the address, and it was sent to foreign countries on short wave lengths.

They will fly in a plane made in Spain, saying they decided on this after German, French and other makes had proved unsuitable for such a long journey. The plane will not be ready until August, 1928.

Democratic Minority Succeeds in Forcing Appropriation Bill Into Joint Conference Committee.

INVESTIGATION OF BOARD REVIEWED

One Representative Calls Repudiation of Report by the Senate a "Disgraceful Deal."

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
JEFFERSON CITY, March 31.—Efforts of administration Republicans and the Prison Board lobby to drive through the House an increase in the salary appropriation for the State penitentiary, already voted in the Senate by a combination of Republicans and insurgent Democrats, were blocked by a Democratic minority in the House late yesterday and the penal appropriation bill forced into a joint conference committee for revision. The conference committee has authority to revise the appropriations but its report must be approved by both houses. The Democratic minority's victory halted, for the present, a move to give the State Penal Board $90,000 more for salaries in 1927 and 1928 than was recommended by the Senate Appropriations Committee and $150,000 more than was recommended in the budget prepared by the State Tax Commission. The increase was voted in the Senate Monday by Republicans and the group of Democratic Senators who previously had repudiated the report of the Senate Prison Investigation Committee recommending ouster of the board for extravagance and mismanagement, by forcing confirmation of the five board members. The amendment carrying the increase was submitted by Senator Donnelly of Lebanon, one of the bolters from the Democratic caucus which voted to refuse confirmation of penal commissioners.

Nature of Senate Amendment.
An appropriation of $310,000 from general revenue for salaries was recommended by the Senate Appropriations Committee, but Donnelly's amendment increased this to $460,000. The Tax Commission recommended $250,000 which was the amount appropriated for the last biennial period. This fund is intended as a reserve, as the prison is supposed to be self-supporting from earnings, but in the past the prison management usually has exhausted the general revenue appropriation. The prison lobby of Board members, employees and friendly politicians had been busy since the amendment was adopted in the Senate and a number of Democrats had been lined up with administration Republicans to force House concurrence in the amendment. Other appropriation bills amended by the Senate have been thrown into conference committees immediately when returned to the House for concurrence, but a drive was made to put over the penal bill amendments apparently to forestall possible reductions through revision by a conference committee.

In opposing concurrence in the increase, Representative W. E. Whittecot of Monroe County, referring to the prison investigation and repudiation of the findings of the Senate investigating committee, said, "there is a condition existing in Jefferson City today that it is more disgraceful than the alum deal years ago."

Called Disgraceful Deal.
"I don't propose to be bound by that disgraceful proceeding in the Senate," Whittecot said, "and you can't use my vote to approve a disgraceful deal like that." The "alum deal" was the basis of a legislative scandal several years ago.

Republican members of the House, aided by 16 Democrats, defeated a motion to refuse concurrence and put the bill into conference committee. The same line up then voted to concur in the amendment but the administration forces failed to gain concurrence in a second Senate amendment, appropriating $500,000 for the penal board to build and operate an intermediate reformatory, and this tied up the bill.

The 16 Democrats who voted with the Republicans against the motion to throw the bill into conference were Representatives Haskell, Hicks, Holcomb, Lafferty, Leahy and Lemire of Kansas City; Barnhouse of Iron County; Harper of Vernon; Hill of Linn; Job of Nodaway; Jackson of Oregon; Smith of Callaway; Stone of Buchanan; Witte of Scotland; Wisdom of Pike and Holliday of Atchison.

Errors in Vote Corrected.
When the vote was taken on the intermediate reformatory amendment, it appeared the required majority of 16 barely had been obtained. A verification demanded by Representatives D. L. Bales of Shannon and T. J. Roney of Jasper, who led the fight, developed an

NEW SEWER LAW IN EFFECT NOW IN ST. LOUIS COUNTY

Measure Sponsored by Senator Ralph, Which Carried an Emergency Clause, Signed.

Gov. Baker has signed the Ralph sewer bill, designed chiefly for St. Louis County and loaded with jobs for lawyers and engineers. It was announced at a meeting of the County Chamber of Commerce directors, at the American Hotel yesterday. This law, a duplicate of one providing for county sewer districts knocked out last year by the State Supreme Court, but revised to overcome legal faults, is effective now as it carries an emergency clause.

The chamber directors, believing the law might be utilized for abuses by self-serving interests, authorized appointment of a Sewer Committee to keep the public advised of formation of new districts in St. Louis County and to confer with Circuit Judges McElhinney and Wurdeman, who would appoint district directors.

E. G. Curtis of Webster Groves, of the law firm of Nagel & Kirby, was named chairman of this committee, with former Mayor Edward Beecher of Kirkwood, F. J. Hollocher of Clayton, a banker; Ralph F. Bixby, a subdivision promoter, and L. William Gerling of Wellston, a real estate dealer, as members.

Any attorney can draw up a sewer district, on a plan prepared by anybody, Joseph R. Matthews, president of the chamber, said in opening the discussion. He asserted that in the past he courts appointed directors recommended by the attorney, who then could choose a lawyer and engineer for the district and fix the latter's fees. Matthews, who is a banker, asserted that language of the law made it compulsory for the directors to accept whatever report on a sewer plan the engineer might make, but Curtis and Robert A. Roessel, City Attorney of Webster Groves, insisted the directors had discretion as to this.

"You can see for yourselves," Matthews said, "how much influence is going to be brought to bear on the Circuit Judges to create sewer districts. Each of you can take it for granted you are going to get a district where you live, and you will be interested in the selections for directors. The people will have nothing to do except to protest to the Court that their districts have no need for sewers. Kirkwood, for example, may get in a district running to the Mississippi River; we out there might stand for a sanitary sewer of this size, but not a storm sewer. Kirkwood is in a good position, but our neighbors are not, for we are simply dumping our sewage onto them now. It is of the utmost concern to every property owner in the county to know who the directors of his sewer district are and something about the plans."

Curtis, defending the law, said it arose from the great necessity for adequate means of providing county sewers. He advocated publicity to prevent abuses of the law and dissemination of information about its provisions. Any 100 residents of a district—meaning any contiguous area of common drainage—may petition the Circuit Court, he explained, to create a sewer district, and public notice then will be given of a hearing, and the Court will determine the need for the district and appoint the directors. Curtis said he would trust the present Circuit Judges to make proper appointments, and declared there was nothing hindering in recommendations for directors.

Court in Control of Districts. Once a district is formed, it is always a matter pending before the court, subject to protests, Curtis continued. Contractors building the sewers will be paid cash, and the districts will raise the money by issuing 20-year bonds and taxing property within their boundaries to pay off interest and principal, under a special assessment by a board of three commissioners appointed by Circuit Court, apart from the directors. Use of property may be considered in fixing the assessment; for instance, 40 acres used as a farm would be taxed lower than if subdivided, with numerous houses demanding sewer facilities.

Roessel declared that the county needs sewers, but that the new law should not be held pernicious. He said it might be found advisable to consolidate some groups of little sewer districts into larger units, or even to make a district of the whole county. Matthews, who did not think the latter suggestion practical, remarked that if utilization of this law "runs wild" the effect will be to force the county into St. Louis. The chamber leaders were prominent opponents of the recent city-county merger, which failed.

William Stocker, who received $4500 as engineer of a Webster Groves sewer district, a project abandoned when the old law was knocked out, told the chamber directors the new law would be a plum tree for engineers and lawyers only if "you let the people run wild with it." He said it was more dangerous to hire lawyers only if "you let the people run wild with it." He said it was more dangerous to hire lawyers and engineers at too low a fee than too high.

HOUSE BALKS AT $90,000 INCREASE IN PRISON PAYROLL

"aye" was recorded for Representative Ely of Dunklin, who was absent, and Rollins of Boone was recorded "aye" when he voted "no." These corrections reduced the vote to 74 and the amendment failed. Republican leaders began rounding up absent members in preparation for reconsideration, and started a drive to persuade one of the 28 Democrats who voted against the amendment to move a reconsideration. Some insurgent Democratic Senators aided in this attempt, but the 26 Representatives each refused to recede. Reconsideration could be moved only by one who had voted against the amendment. The Republicans then accepted a proposal by the minority group to reconsider the vote on both the prison increase and the intermediate reformatory, conditional upon the House then voting to reject both Senate amendments and throw the bill into conference. This was done, accomplishing the purpose of the Democrats and blocking, for the present, the move to give the Penal Board an even larger amount than it spent during the last two years, described by the Senate investigating committee as an era of "flagrant extravagance."

In every circle you see many people who have lost their excess fat. Probably some of your friends are among them. When you meet one ask how she reduced, and we think she will tell you Marmola.

The modern way to fat reduction is Marmola Prescription Tablets. It strikes at the cause of the trouble, which usually lies in a gland. No unusual exercise or diet is required. You simply take four tablets of Marmola daily until the weight comes down to normal. The way is easy, pleasant, prompt.

Child Gets Sick, Cross, Feverish if Constipated

Look at tongue! Then give fruit laxative for stomach, bowels

"California Fig Syrup" can't harm children and they love it

Mother, your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign the little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomachache, diarrhea, remember, a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Fig Syrup" for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless, delicious, "fruit laxative," and it never fails to effect a good "inside cleansing." Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle.

Keep it handy in your home. A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup," then see that it is made by "The California Fig Syrup Company."

THE INTERNATIONAL SHANGHAI SETTLEMENT: WHY CHINESE HATE IT

evil, but the anti-foreign sentiment, the bitterness that rankles in the Chinese heart against the "foreign devils" dates from the Opium War. And this hatred flamed anew with each fresh disturbance in China, whatever the primary cause of discontent.

An Englishman, Arnold J. Toynbee, in the current issue of the magazine, Asia, remarks: "It is sufficient to observe that British interests were the largest foreign interests at stake and that it was Great Britain who had forced half-open the door for foreign trade with China, which formerly had stood ajar. This high-handed act had been performed more than 50 years before, but 'under dogs' have proverbially long memories."

China Grab-Bag of Powers. In 1842 there were five treaty ports; now there are 48. Since 1842 the Powers, except the United States, have engaged in a mad scramble for whatever there was to be had in China. As a result of the Opium War England got Hong Kong, Japan got the island of Formosa, Germany got the island of Kiaochow, and the United States got the Philippines. In 1895 France took over Tonkin as a protectorate. Japan wrested Formosa from China in 1895, and at the same time Korea was declared independent and more treaty ports were opened. Germany laid hold on the Shantung Peninsula in 1898. Port Arthur was leased to Russia, Wei-Hai-Wei to Britain.

So things went until the Boxer uprising. Secretary Hay of the United States had just proposed, in 1899, an "open-door" policy in China when the Boxers, encouraged by the palace party at Peking, undertook to close the door for good. This action resulted in the allied men to the relief of the legations in Peking for which the allied nations were going to make the Chinese pay $750,000,000. The United States, however, had this amount cut to $207,000,000—and then returned its allotment of it to the Chinese.

Rise of Cantonese.

The Manchukuo dynasty in China ended in 1911 with the declaration of a republic. Soon, however, the South split away. In 1918 Sun Yat-sen established a Southern republic at Canton, but this was short-lived. Three years later it was tried again, this time with soviet Russia backing and it has continued to date. Within the Kuomintang the Cantonese party are two factions, the right and the left. The right, which has claimed a majority, is opposed to sovietism; the left, of which Foreign Minister Eugene Chen is a leader, is pro-soviet.

But right and left are united on domestic policy, the first and foremost demand of which is for the abolition of unequal treaties and extraterritoriality.

THREE INDICTED FOR ASSAULT

Two of Men Accused by Mother of Four Are Ex-Convicts.

Indictments charging criminal assault were returned yesterday to the grand jury against three men alleged to have attacked Mrs. Florence Boice, 22 years old, in her home at 115A Cass avenue, early Sunday. Her husband, Russell Boice, is serving a term in the State Penitentiary and she maintains a home for their four small children.

The men indicted were arrested the day of the attack. They are Earl Durkin, 26 and Harvey Lindy, 23, ex-convicts, and John Kopfstein.

THREE JUNK DEALERS
INDICTED AS 'FENCES'

Men Accused of Buying Stolen
Metal From Negro Released on Bonds.

The arrest of three junk dealers yesterday on bench warrants, following their indictment on a charge of receiving stolen property, signals one of the infrequent attempts of the Circuit Attorney's office to fix the blame on alleged fences rather than the petty crooks with whom they deal.

Those arrested are Meyer Holtzman, 64 years old, president of the Holtzman Metal Co., 2200 North Broadway, and a professional bondsman; his son, Isadore, 31, of 2626 Burd avenue; and Morris Fishman of 1731 Biddle street. They were later released on bonds of $2500 each.

William Weakley, Negro ex-convict of 2202 Walnut street, who was arrested March 7, admitted that he had stolen 26 pigs of habbit metal from the Great Western Smelting Co., 4041 Park avenue. He told police that Fishman had told him he would buy all the metal Weakley could steal, saying, "I know where I can sell it." Detectives, tracing seven pigs of the metal from Fishman's place, found them at the Holtzman junk yard. The pigs bore the stamp of the Great Western Smelting Co. and were cast in storage size so that any man experienced in handling metal would know they had not been sold legitimately, officials of the Great Western firm said.

Tastes like your own cake

because it's made from a genuine old-fashioned Cook-Book Recipe just as you'd make it yourself

Egg Fluff Cake

There is only one way a cake can have that lovely "home-made" taste. That is to make it as a housewife would. From a Cook-Book Recipe and purest ingredients. And that is exactly the way we make this new cake.

The name of this wonderful new cake is EGG FLUFF CAKE. It's a moist golden sponge—light and fluffy. Deliciously flavored with vanilla, and covered with a rich butter-cream icing, sprinkled with fresh walnuts. You've really never eaten anything quite so luscious.

Here's a way to prove it. To give this cake its "home-made" taste we make it as you would. From a tested Cook-Book Recipe—followed to the letter. (Inside each wrapper you will find the exact recipe we use. All ingredients and measurements.)

Make an EGG FLUFF CAKE yourself from this recipe, if you care to, and compare it with ours. You will then see that this is a real Cook Book Cake—that it must be baked with purest cream, freshest eggs and butter, and the best grade of sugar, pastry flour and flavoring extract to taste so good.

And this is true of all Cook Book Cakes.

You must be satisfied

Your grocer now has EGG FLUFF CAKE. Try one. If you don't agree that it is perfectly delicious—and that it has a real "home-made" taste—return the unused portion and get your money back. We want you to do this. We will repay your grocer.

SEEKS RELEASE OF $500,000 ESTATE TO SURVIVING HEIR

Trustee of William R. Pye Holdings Which Grew to $3,000,000 From $150,000 Appeals to Court.

Dissolution of a 28-year-old trust estate created by William R. Pye, an officer of the old Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney Dry Goods Co., at his death in 1899, and which is valued now at $503,511, is sought by the trustee, Benjamin G. Chapman Jr., of 55 Kingsbury place, in an application in Circuit Court today.

Chapman asked that the estate be turned over to his mother, Mrs. Louisa H. Chapman of Detroit, Pye's niece, who with her sister, Mrs. Fannie H. Higbee, of 555 Clara avenue, was co-beneficiary of the trust estate. With the death of Mrs. Higbee in January, Mrs. Chapman became sole heir to the property, being the beneficiary of Mrs. Higbee in her will.

Pye left an estate, valued at $150,000 which grew to more than $3,000,000 in 1918, by the phenomenal increase from $16,000 to $2,000,000 in the value of a block of Burroughs Adding Machine stock he owned. In 1918 the courts ruled that stock dividends were income and ordered that $2,500,000 of the trust estate be divided between the two beneficiaries. Mrs. Higbee left an estate of $1,341,960, to her sister, consisting mainly of money and securities received in the 1918 settlement.

Chapman, who is president of the American Central Fire Insurance Co., became trustee in 1923, succeeding his father. In his inventory he reported 440 shares of Burroughs stock valued at $53,894.

MAYOR REFUSES TO DISCUSS

U. R. REORGANIZATION NOW Tells J. W. Newman Fare Increase Ruling and Auditor's Report Must Come First.

J. K. Newman, a leader in the Reorganization Committee of the United Railways Co., today conferred with Mayor Miller on the possibility of speeding up the reorganization plans and reaching an agreement with city officials on a new franchise ordinance.

After the conference, which lasted an hour, in the Mayor's private office, Newman expressed disappointment at the delay in negotiations. The Mayor had ruled, he said, that no further negotiations should take place between the reorganizers and the city until the State Public Service Commission had ruled in the receiver's pending application for an 8-cent fare and until an auditor's report on the company's earnings is completed.

Mayor Miller declared the conference resulted in no conclusions. He said he could see no use for further discussion until the fare case and various court actions involving valuation and fares were settled. It was expected the Public Service Commission will act in the fare case for a month.

ST. LOUIS TO HAVE YIDDISH DAILY PAPER, BEGINNING MAY 1

St. Louis will have the fourth provincial Yiddish language daily in the United States on May 1 when the Jewish Record, a weekly newspaper published at 5030 Easton avenue, begins daily publication, excepting Saturdays. The other Yiddish language newspapers, in addition to the five dailies of New York City, are published in Chicago, Philadelphia and Cleveland.

A serious effort will be made to have the new publication serve as the nucleus for a revived interest in Yiddish and Hebrew literature. Application to increase its capital stock from $25,000 to $75,000 will be made at Jefferson City. The paper was established in 1913 by Sol Goldman, a real estate man, who is now a director. Leon Gellman is editor of the editorial page, Joel Sayvatz managing editor, and Nat S. Hurwitz business manager.

MEN IN BOATS FIGHT FLOOD Part of Levee in Wabash County, Ill., Is Broken.

By the Associated Press. MOORE, CARROLL, Ill., March 31.—Nearly 100 men, in large boats, today fought to stop up a hole in the Rochester-McCleary levee in the south part of Wabash County. A large stream was pouring through the hole and threatening inundate the levee and 5000 acres of land.

Several farmers and much livestock are in the area, less than half of which had been covered by water this morning. Pressure of water washed a hole in the foundation of the dike near the pumping station. The Wabash River has fallen one foot from the flood peak of 24.3 feet.

WIFE SUES T. G. STANLEY FOR SEPARATE MAINTENANCE

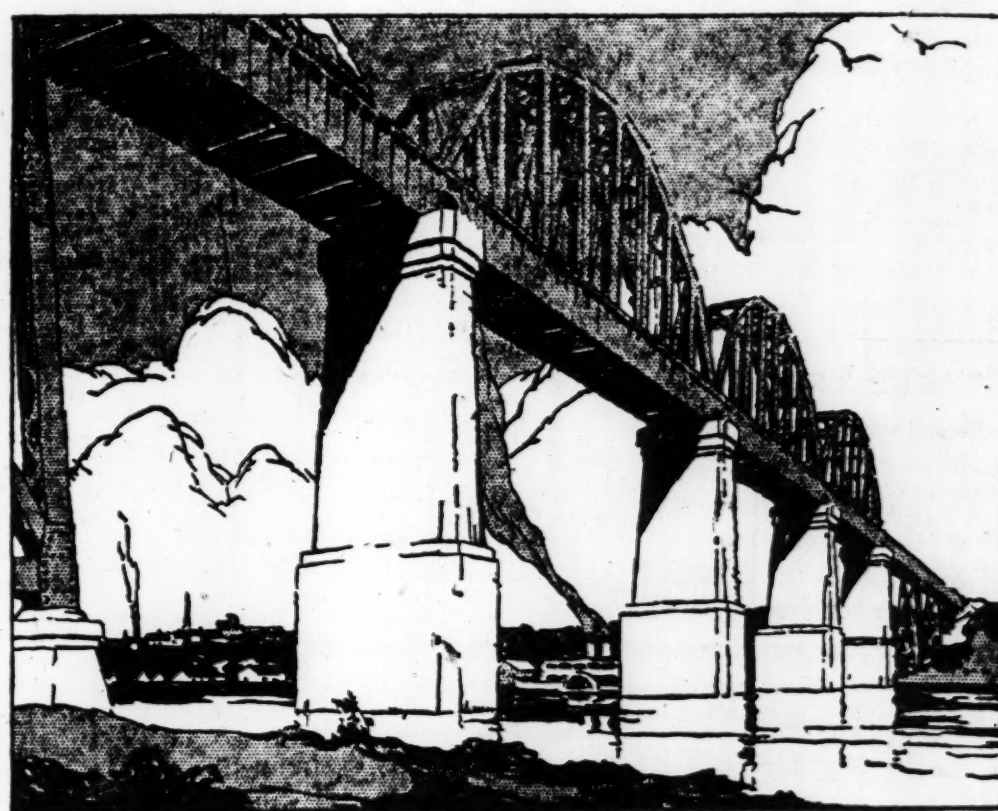

Mrs. Marie Stanley yesterday filed suit in Circuit Court against Thomas Gerald Stanley for $250 a month separate maintenance, alleging he deserted her May 9, 1924. They were married Sept. 26, 1922. Stanley is a son of the late Charles P. Stanley, cigar dealer, who left an estate valued at $300,000, from which the son, with other heirs, is entitled to an income under a trust arrangement.

Mrs. Stanley says she does not know the present whereabouts of her husband. She filed a writ in connection with her suit to attach property in which he has an interest. She is living with a relative in Washington, but recently resided at the Queen's Daughters' Home, 2730 Lindell boulevard.

FOR 24 YEARS ATLAS HAS GROWN UP WITH THE MIDDLE WEST

Great Mid-West railroads and contractors choose ATLAS for its tested quality and strength

WHEN you buy a bag of Portland cement for a kitchen doorstep, no lives or engineering reputations will hang on the result. It will be a better doorstep, however, if you select a cement which has passed the tests that make a great railway bridge, a Keokuk dam, or a Panama Canal safe for centuries to come.

The new Santa Fe bridge across the Mississippi at Ft. Madison, Iowa, is only one of many outstanding concrete jobs where Atlas Portland Cement satisfies all the requirements of eminent construction engineers. The roster of Atlas users in the Middle West includes most of the important railroads entering its home territory, the "Corn Belt" states.

Atlas was chosen, too, for the greatest concrete undertaking of all time, the Panama Canal. Of the 8,250,000 barrels of Atlas shipped to the Isthmus in eight years, not one failed to pass every government test. For the huge lock of the New Orleans inner harbor canal (a job hardly less difficult than Panama) 125,000 barrels of Atlas were required. Nearly a million barrels of Atlas were used at Muscle Shoals, 700,000 in the Keokuk dam, and 106,000 in the remarkable new Mendota highway bridge near Minneapolis.

Wherever strength and endurance are insured by exhaustive tests of materials, Atlas qualifies. Call on your Atlas dealer before you build or plan even small repairs. The sole distributor between Atlas plants and users, he adds to its economy, makes it easy to buy and performs a valuable service for you and your community.

GARAGE GUARD STABBED TO DEATH FOR $30 OR LESS

John Goetz, 65-Year-Old Collinsville Watchman, Found Murdered and Coins Scattered About.

The robber or robbers who stabbed John Goetz to death last night, in Lowe's garage at Center and Clay streets, in Collinsville, got no more than $30 in cash in the holdup of the 65-year-old watchman. It was determined today.

Goetz's body was found at 12:10 a. m. today by State Highway Patrolman Delaney, who visited the garage to get an automobile repair part. The body was against the wall in the office, stabbed in the heart.

A physician said the watchman had been dead about an hour. There was about $10 left in the register after closing time last night, and Goetz normally carried between $15 and $20 himself. His pocketbook had been rifled and thrown on the floor beside the body, where a dime and three pennies also were found. The cash drawer also had been robbed.

Goetz was married, and lived in Collinsville with his wife. He had been employed at the garage about a year. A report that an automobile was seen driving from the garage about the time of the murder has not been verified.

MALAGA, Spain, March 31.—The recipe for Spain's "lost bread," almost forgotten, has been discovered in an old monastery, and is fast becoming a popular table delicacy. It is a sort of fritter with a cinnamon flavor.

The recipe—Cut ordinary white bread into fingers, and pour over them the yolk of one egg beaten in a glass of Malaga wine. Dip the soaked strips in beaten egg and fry to a golden brown in deep boiling lard. Drain well and sprinkle with cinnamon and sugar.

ARMS PARLEY DEFEATS OFFICER LIMITATION

Britain Had Suggested Fixed Ratio Between Number of Officers and Men.

By the Associated Press. GENEVA, March 31.—The countries practicing military conscription, including France and Japan, won another point at yesterday's session of the League of Nations Preparatory Commission which is seeking to draw up a general disarmament treaty.

A British proposal to have a definite proportion fixed between the numbers of officers and men in active service was defeated through the opposition of the conscription countries.

Viscount Cecil of England suggested that the proportion of officers should not exceed one to every 15 men, but the conscription representatives, led by Paul Boncour, France, argued that conscript armies, being less efficient than permanent armies, required more officers for the proper training of recruits. A compromise was reached by which each country would announce the number of its officers.

The commission accepted a provision that each country shall be at liberty to send reinforcements to its colonies, provided that the total of its forces, at home and abroad, does not exceed the maximum allowed under the proposed treaty.

There was an animated discussion today over whether military organizations subject to limitation should include police forces, customs officials, forest guards and other similar bodies.

Hugh Gibson, American delegate, remarked that the formula under debate would apply to the Grand Army of the Republic in the United States. Since these Civil War veterans average around 80 years of age, he respectfully doubted whether they should be classed with active military organizations. He added that American customs officers and forest guards are unarmed and therefore not useful in a military capacity. Decision went over to a later date.

PUBLISHER DALE ARRESTED ON CRIMINAL LIBEL CHARGE

His Newspaper Blamed Judge Dearth and Muncie Mayor for Two Murders.

By the Associated Press. MUNCIE, Ind., March 31.—George R. Dale, publisher of the Muncie Post-Democrat, was arrested on a charge of criminal libel at his home here this morning by Sheriff Harry B. McAuley and a deputy, and is being held in jail in lieu of $10,000 bond.

Dale's newspaper contained an article on Feb. 18 placing the blame for two Muncie murders on Judge Clarence W. Dearth and Mayor John Hampton, because of alleged lax law enforcement. The Judge ordered copies of the newspaper confiscated and a few days later the Delaware County grand jury returned an indictment against the editor charging criminal libel. It was on this indictment that he was arrested today.

Impeachment charges against Judge Dearth are being heard by the State Senate.

Only 514 of Them Bagged in Entire State Last Season.

By the Associated Press. PHILADELPHIA, March 31.—The black bear of Pennsylvania is among the cleverest of animals in eluding hunters.

In summer, when protected by game laws, he rambles carelessly about the State, looking things over and picking up delicacies here and there in orchards, berry patches and dairies. Now and then he pauses to watch farm hands at work. When fall comes and he is actually seeking refuge in remote ravines, away from hunters. It was only with the greatest perseverance that Pennsylvania hunters bagged 514 bears last season.

Ring down the Curtain on the Obscene!

Obscene books, obscene magazines, obscene newspapers and obscene plays are multiplying with astounding rapidity throughout every corner of the United States!

With this evidence of the tendencies of the times before our eyes, it is little wonder that, defying all standards, some plays have recently been produced in New York with themes so objectionable as to be unmentionable.

When the public learns what sort of plays have been produced—what worse ones threaten—a storm of indignation will ring down the curtain on this filth, once and for all.

Women's clubs, churches, teachers and all decent folk in general owe it to themselves to face the facts—the sinister facts, as set forth by Frederic F. Van de Water in The Obscene Drama, in the April issue now on sale, ten cents.

The BILLIONAREA!

the GREATER ST. LOUIS MARKET

One of America's Greatest Market Opportunities for Advertisers

There is nothing mythical or artificial about The Billionarea. It actually exists; it is real; it is physical. Any salesman can see with his own eyes when he gets into The Billionarea and when he reaches the sparsely settled country districts beyond.

The Billionarea is the area that includes all of the concentrated population in metropolitan St. Louis—the Greater St. Louis Market on both the Missouri and Illinois sides of the Mississippi.

The Billionarea properly excludes the outside sparsely settled areas, where average family purchasing power is always low, where the distances make personal selling expensive and unprofitable and where newspaper coverage is necessarily insufficient to be effective in moving merchandise.

The Billionarea—A compact market economically reached

Only 16 miles wide by 21 miles long, The Billionarea can be traveled by automobile in 30 to 45 minutes. Population is concentrated in The Billionarea to an average of more than 6600 to the square mile. Retail stores are feet and minutes apart, not hours and miles.

The Billionarea—One of the largest and richest of metropolitan markets

With a population of over a million and a purchasing power of over a billion, The Billionarea is one of the greatest volume consuming markets in America for almost any product—a market so great as to offer a volume outlet for a large part of the production of any factory.

With its high average family purchasing power and other favorable factors for selling and advertising effort, The Billionarea is unequaled by any other metropolitan market in its appeal to advertisers.

One newspaper covers The Billionarea so completely that it alone is effective in moving merchandise in volume.

That newspaper is the St. Louis Post-Dispatch—having by far the greatest circulation in The Billionarea, and carrying by far the greatest volume of local, national and classified advertising.

EASTERN WRITER PICKS BROWNS TO FINISH SEVENTH IN A. L. RACE

Club Has a Bad Infield And Uncertain Pitching In Davis Walsh's Opinion

Tigers Are Rated as Strongest Among Contenders, With Athletics, Senators and Yankees Making Up Remainder of the First Division.

By Davis J. Walsh.

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 31.—Largely because the Detroit ball club in all probability will be fighting for its manager this season and not with him, the writer ventures today to name the Tigers as potentially the strongest team in the American League up to and including this, the present moment.

It has been an annual absurdity to declare in March that the season is over. There is no law against a man playing smart, even if he knows better, that particular brand of hocus pocus may well be retired from circulation.

Therefore, the clubs are listed below merely in the order of their potential strength, with an easy mind, or the equivalent:

1. Detroit Tigers.

2. Philadelphia Athletics.

3. Washington Senators.

4. New York Yankees.

5. Cleveland Indians.

6. Chicago White Sox.

7. St. Louis Browns.

8. Boston Red Sox.

The Tigers have made only two changes between seasons but, speaking with malice toward none, both have been for the better. The addition of Marty McManus has staked the infield to the punch and steadiness it needed. The managerial trade of Moriarty for Cobb has given the club the peace and good will it never before has had.

Anything Can Happen.

With any kind of a break, this outfit might have won at least one pennant during the last five years, but either it couldn't or wouldn't win for Cobb. This version of its failure has been common gossip for years; so much so, in fact, that the Tigers were the hot tip of nearly every baseball man in the South this spring. The prophets can't go very far wrong, at that, in touting a club that has had good but manhandled pitching, fine catching, an adequate infield, and three outfielders who hit over .365, not to mention a fourth, who led the league during the greater part of the 1925 season.

Anything, of course, can happen in six months and many things will. The White Sox, for example, would be a far better bet at this writing if the unfortunate Mostil had delayed his attempted suicide.

The Philadelphia Athletics have more ballplayers than they know what to do with and, therefore, are ranked below the pace. One man's guess on this ball club is as good as another's. But, offhand, I would hesitate to go too far with a team which doesn't know whether Collins or Bishop will play second base; Boley or Galloway will be its shortstop; Hale or Dykes its third baseman, and Brannan or Poole its first baseman, to say nothing of its superfluity of outfielders. The club has too many candidates, too much managerial timber, too much uncertainty.

Senators Third Choice.

The Senators, with that wonderful outfield of Goslin, Speaker and Rice; a smart, variegated offense and fair pitching, might go anywhere but right now they seem to be no better than a third choice.

Long Shots Win In All Races at Greyhound Track

No Foolin' Gains Victory in Inaugural Feature—Actor Boy Tires.

By Jack Alexander.

Greyhound racing came back to Collinsville, the "Investigator" came back to greyhound racing, rain came down to plague the "Investigator" last night, and the Madison Kennel Club's spring meeting was officially opened.

In view of the decidedly adverse weather conditions, which prevailed for two hours before the program started and hence no doubt influenced the attendance, the turnout of about 4000 patrons showed beyond doubt that the sport, or business, is after one year, firmly established here, and not to be affected seriously by climatic vagaries.

Prizes paid last night were of a considerably high order. The Model, winner of the opener, paid $22.20; Nell Gwynn paid back $21 in the second; Mickey's Pal $12.60 in the third; Shenandoah, $13.60 in the fourth; No Foolin', $16.40 in the fifth; St. Joe, $11 in the sixth; Reckless Buck, $12.80 in the seventh and Smoky Blue set a high mark for the evening by giving back $26 in the eighth, a hurdle race.

No Foolin' Wins Feature.

Due to the sloppy condition of the track, early breakers had the advantage and won most of the races. No Foolin' got out in front early in the Inaugural Stakes and outdistanced the others in the stretch of the long three-eighths grind.

Actor Boy, owned by James Corbett of St. Louis, was expected to

The Passing Show.

R. HORNSBY'S stock is still for sale.

But as he's after too much kale, it's hard to find a buyer.

And, if the Cards play winning ball,

And cop the pennant in the fall

The stock will go still higher.

Unless a sale of stock is made,

It looks as though that famous trade

Will be upon the hummer.

If Rogers doesn't cut the price,

He'll cut by just a little ice

For John McGraw this summer.

We notice by the Browns' attack,

George Sisler's batting eye is back

In all its former glory.

If George keeps landing on the ball,

About the Browns in the fall,

There'll be a different story.

We note the former batting champ,

Sojourning at the training camp,

Has swung a wicked willow.

We hope they'll all be in the "pink,"

For, much, we are inclined to think,

Depends upon Melillo.

APPROPRIATE.

We note that Umpire Rasberry officiated in the Browns-Mobile game.

There is no question that Rasberry will get his when he gets in a jam.

Rasberry's parents must have thought he was cut out for an umpire and named him accordingly.

"Consul Hands Uruguay Soccer Team

Stiff Reprimand."

That soccer team, we take it, is not putting on a good-will tour.

If those Uruguayans don't cut out the rough stuff we'll call out the Marines.

"Judge's Order Restrains Picketing

How many pickets make offense?

Paper milk bottles have made a hit in London. Why not try them out for soda pop? They'd make a hit with the umpires.

"Illinois Mines to Close Thursday."

That ought to help some in the smoke-abatement movement.

A bill has been introduced in the Missouri Legislature to replace the ropes with the electric chair. Why not let the customers hold a referendum on it?

Neither method appeals very strongly to the criminal mind, but everyone will please everybody, as the feller says.

Why not let those who live by the gun perish by the gun? Seems fair enough.

"Liberals Take Small Town."

That's why they call them Liberals. Better tighten up and take some big towns.

Heard a bet today that the Browns would finish higher than the Cardinals. It may take the world's series to settle that bet.

The members of the Mobile team wrote numbers on their backs.

Whereupon, the Browns proceeded to take their number.

Ban Johnson States He Is Ready to Take an Active Part In American League Affairs

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 31.—Baseball followers were interested today in the statement of Ban Johnson at Excelsior Springs, Mo., that he felt he had recovered from his recent illness and was ready to take an active hand in American League baseball affairs again.

Johnson, who has been on indefinite leave of absence as president of the junior circuit, said he expected to return here in a few days to attend a meeting of league officials.

It was learned today that the league presy paid an unheralded visit to Chicago last week, spent considerable time in the league offices, and returned to Excelsior Springs Saturday night without news of his visit becoming public.

Looks Much Improved.

"Mr. Johnson appeared very much improved in health," said William Harridge, league secretary. "However, he did not say when he planned to resume his active duties."

Harridge said he knew of no league meetings to be held here in the immediate future.

Johnson was retired from active leadership by league directors after his clash with Baseball Commissioner Landis over the Cobb-Speaker affair. No further controversy was anticipated by baseball circles should Johnson resume active duties as it was believed that both he and Landis would be content to call the incident closed.

Sees Close Flag Race.

EXCELSIOR SPRINGS, Mo., March 31.—"For three months I was a very sick man," Ban Johnson said here today, "but now I feel completely restored to health and ready to return to my duties."

"The American League is better balanced than ever," Johnson commented on the coming season. "It will be a great race. Aside from the three valiant pilots of last year there are five new managers leading fighting teams this year."

"Baseball scandals haven't hurt the game because it is fundamentally honest. There isn't a wrinkle in our league. Everything has been ironed out and we are all ready to go."

Johnson will leave for Chicago in a day or so, he said, to attend a meeting of the league officials. He will witness the opening game in an American League city to be selected later and then divide his time between league duties and watering at this resort, he said.

WHAT MAKES A CIGAR POPULAR?

Some claim it is the blend; others say it is the selecting and curing of the tobacco; still others maintain it is the fragrance or the burn of a cigar that spells its popularity.

Even in our own organization there is a difference of opinion as to the main reason for the growing demand for San Felice at St. Louis. It is the special combination of tobacco used, the delightful aroma, the smoothness, or the mellowness? In your opinion, Mr. Smoker, which feature is it that has won so many new friends that we have been compelled to double and triple the production on San Felice within the past few months. Try a San Felice today, and see for yourself if it isn't that mild, smooth, fragrant and mellow cigar you are looking for. It costs only 5c to find out.

SYNOPSIS
of what has gone before in Ella Cinders

"Ella Cinders" (or Cinderella) is the character about whom myths of stories books and plays have been written in many languages. Now she has made her appearance in a comic strip. Ella, a slavey in the home of her cruel stepmother, and her two horrid stepsisters, Prissie and Lotta Pili, devoted her thoughts and dreams to becoming a movie queen. Her little brother, Blackie, also lived with her at the Cinders home. Ella's favorite fan magazine announced a beauty contest with a trip to Hollywood and a chance to act in the movie as first prize.

She saved her pennies and had her picture taken. Her fat stepmother, Lotta, also planned to enter the contest. The two pictures accidentally got switched. Lotta received notification that she had won the prize, and lured it over poor little Ella, but when the agent of the contest arrived to award the prize, he discovered the error that had been made.

Accompanied by her little brother, Ella left for Hollywood. Waite Lifter, her ice man sweethearts, swore to follow her. Ella heard of a great movie magazine that had announced that he was always willing to give new talent a hearing. She discovered that he was her father who disappeared years before!

After their reunion her father explained how he changed his name and had succeeded as a motion picture director and producer.

Ella had prefigured herself as a siren in silks and jewels, and was tremendously disappointed when she learned that her first character delineation was to be that of a poor little kitchen slavey.

But Ella's acquaintance with the luxuries and limousines of a movie queen were short-lived. O. Waters Neek, the dark, handsome young man whom Ella had previously met, and who had snubbed her when he learned of her position in the Cinders household, turned out to be her father's assistant.

In the meantime, Waite Lifter was on his way out to the coast to press his suit with Ella and to make his fame and fortune in the cinema city.

Ella then was captivated by a wily suitor, Sydney Smoother, to whom she became engaged. Meantime Ella and Blackie are put off the train at a station in the plains. When they arrive at Jim Blunt's ranch where Ella gets a job as cook, she finds a movie company from Hollywood there, shooting a "western." Fluffy Fizzle, with whom Jim Blunt is obviously infatuated, is the star. Her old friend, Phil M. Waister, is director—and her older enemy, O. Waters Neek, is production manager.

To get revenge on Ella, O. Waters Neek kidnaps Blackie and takes him to a mountain cabin. Ella finds him, and she and Blackie take care of an old prospector, Panamint Perkins, who is the owner of the cabin and who has been hurt in a fall in the hills.

In gratitude for getting Panamint home and mending him, he gives Ella one half of a cave full of ransom which he has found. The other half is in the hands of John Smith, a young geologist in New York. Panamint tells Ella that if she will go to New York, find John Smith and in the map together, she will get half the proceeds.

So Ella and Blackie start, and much adventure befalls them on the way. O. Waters Neek, who has heard of the map, pursues Ella to get it away from her.

ATLANTA'S TREATMENT OF NEGRO CRITICISED

"Mental Health" Needed There to Lower Death Rate, Urban League Speaker Says.

The death rate among Negroes in Atlanta, Ga., already higher than in Northern cities, will continue to increase until Atlanta's white citizens are purged of "mental morbidity," according to a report on condition in that city, prepared by Alonzo C. Thayer, Negro executive secretary of the Urban League there, and read yesterday before the annual Urban League conference at the People's Building, Jefferson avenue and Market street.

Dr. George B. Mangold, executive secretary of the Church Federation, presided.

"The greatest need of Atlanta is mental health," Thayer said. "Atlanta must clear its mental vision of the fog that the two to one death ratio for Negro and white infants, respectively, does not need attention. She must realize that the large amount of money lost to her $5,000 Negroes through physical illness annually could be better spent in the building of better homes and the reduction of physical morbidity and mortality rates of the city in general."

No Recreation Facilities.
The large proportion of sickness and deaths among Atlanta Negroes is due to lack of recreation facilities and their low incomes, Thayer said. He declared Atlanta owned 24 public parks, and had turned over but one, the smallest, to the Negro. The Atlanta City Council recently passed an act providing that all white and semiskilled labor should be paid a minimum of $100 a month, but took no action to increase the pay of Negroes employed by the city, who make an average of $12 weekly.

The Atlanta Negro is further discouraged, Thayer said, by being barred from the polls and by mistreatment in the courts.

"This mental illness (of the whites)," Thayer said, "meets a ready response in the Negro in most cases. He determines to seek a community where he has less morbidity of mind directed against him or, remaining, he resigns himself and considers resistance futile."

The population of Atlanta is approximately 265,000, of which 30 per cent are Negroes, according to Thayer. The death rate for Negroes is 28.5, which is from five to seven points above the Negro death rate in most Northern cities, where conditions are considered unfavorable for them, he added.

Industrial difficulties of the Negro are multiplied on the Pacific Coast, according to a report by T. Arnold Hill, Negro director of industrial relations for the Urban League, because of competition with Mexicans and Orientals. California employers generally believe the Negro is not fitted for skilled work, Hill said, and will not employ skilled Negroes who have had experience in other cities. Despite these facts, Hill said, the Negro population on the Pacific Coast is increasing, most of the Negro men and women being employed in personal or domestic service.

Segregated Districts Growing.
The housing situation among Negroes in St. Louis is "highly unsatisfactory," John T. Clark, Negro secretary for the St. Louis Urban League, told the conference. The segregated districts have been outgrown by the Negroes, Clark said. It is virtually impossible for Negroes to rent houses outside of the segregated district, owing to an agreement among real estate dealers. Nevertheless, Clark said, "expansion of these segregated districts is continuing on in all directions, and will continue in spite of improvement association agreements."

John Hope, Negro president of Morehouse College, Atlanta, said that "feudal segregation" was passing away there, and that the Southern Negro was becoming increasingly aware of his rights and his needs.

NEW YORK, March 31.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted financial review today, says:

"An intermingling of new high and new low records for the year characterized unsettled trading on the stock market today. Shares of the better grade were well supported in some instances were bid up briskly by traders who expected a return to easy money conditions next week to stimulate the demand for seasonal dividend payers. Some stocks, on the other hand, were rather freely offered and continued to drift to lower levels. Mixed conditions were found in the bond market as well, recessions in some groups being offset by further investment buying in other directions.

Erratic Course.

"Although speculators for the decline continued to find weak spots in scattered parts of the list, greater resistance was encountered on recessions and movements became highly erratic before the final hour had been reached. Further liquidation and profit taking served to undermine the market through the forenoon, resulting in a rather general recession, but buying orders increased on the setback and many pivotal issues came back notably. Oil shares were subjected to pressure, although some stocks moved against the trend, such as Lagon, Houston, and Atlantic. Many specialties were pushed forward, while such favorites as U. S. Steel and General Motors stiffened before the end of the day. Steel advancing to a new peak for the year. Dividend paying was in better demand, but buying orders in anticipation of renewed investment demand when large dividend distributions due tomorrow are returned to the market.

"Advances in securities of the better grade, reflecting discriminating purchases, was offset by further selling in stocks of less favored companies, however, and the general trend was decidedly mixed. Railroad shares were in better demand, several scoring fair-sized gains. Southern Pacific, Kansas City Southern, Wabash, Pennsylvania and Erie attracted most attention. Atlantic Coast Line and Seaboard Air Line were under pressure, however. Credit conditions remained satisfactory in face of further calling of loans for month-end requirements. The 4% per cent rate served to attract sufficient funds for the increased demand.

Commodity Charges Limited.

"Recoveries took place in the principal commodity markets, although advances were held under narrow limits. Cotton improved in response to expectations of curtailment in planting. Grains dipped for a time, but rallied before the close.

Pecunia Is Lower.

"Another decline in pecunia provided the only item of interest in foreign exchange trading. Sterling developed a slightly easier tone. But rates on London remained unchanged. Lire and South American rates were somewhat firmer.

THE WOMAN OF IT.

By Marguerite Moores Marshall

"Gentlemen Marry Brunettes"
 "BUT I am the kind of girl that wants to cheer up brunettes," explained Lorelei Lee, by way of her amanuensis, Anita Loos, in the current cosmopolitan. "So that is why I always tell them that, after all, gentlemen marry brunettes. And that really ought to cheer up any girl, in the modern day when gentlemen hardly have anything left to get married for. I mean, after all, there is practically nothing as sacred as a girl getting married."

"Girls of the brunette temperament become very, very serious on the subject of gentlemen. . . . And the result is, that when the gentleman pays his call in the evening, he seems to note that her mind is in a state of low depression. . . . And then he begins to feel very, very sorry for a brunette, that his personal attraction did it to her. So then, he decides that he will feel even better than usual about himself if he becomes even more noble and proposes matrimony. So then he does it. And a brunette has gotten herself a husband."

"But after all as long as legality is what brunettes seem to be principally after, and as long as it takes place sooner or later, they really ought to be quite cheerful about not enjoying themselves after it has occurred. Because philosophy teaches every girl that practically everything has got to go by contrasts, and it is marrying brunettes that makes gentlemen prefer blondes because, after all, the Law of Nature has always got to come out one place or another."

NOW this, we insist, is a most NEOLITHIC defense of brunettes: "Miau! Miau!"—we always knew Lorelei was that kind of a girl. On the other hand, for at least four reasons—hair, eyes and complexion—our own brief for brunettes could hardly be free from partisan prejudices.

Therefore, since a gentleman's blonde or brunette preferences interest practically all women—only a few redheads are at all immune—hereewith enter an uncollected and brilliant testimonial to brunettes' supremacy offered by our gifted contributor, Miles Timothy O'Meara.

"Why does the blonde seem to excel the brunette as a vamp? Yes, I'm asking, but also, I'm answering," he writes. "It's not to be denied that blonde knows how to get guys going—for that matter, she gets 'em both coming and going! But golly, what she pulls off is just small-time stuff. No, when—as (as rarely, and only when driven to it)—the brunette steps out—ta!—the things begin to happen!"

"And that's when she shows her loyalty to her sisters. If she decides to do anything off-color, she goes literally off color. She bleaches her hair; obviously not to make it more attractive, but solely to keep the blush of shame from the beautiful brows of her dusky-locked sisters. When all is ultimately revealed—(don't start to blush me up; I promise not to do it!)—it will be realized that those of the genuinely high-class heart-breakers who appeared to be blonde, were merely so for professional reasons."

"Yet, though she's much more clever at that sort of thing, the brunette doesn't ordinarily go in for vamping—because she knows better! She concentrates, realizing that if the job's to be well done, one man (at a time) is all even a Brunette can handle!"

"This knowledge of her superior charm serves the Brunette well in any emotional crisis. When he whom she usually thinks of as the Light of Her Life, She Shows Her Blight, That Strange Men She's Been Putting Up With All These Years, she knows how to pass it off. She beats it to the old boudoir, thinks what she thinks, and knows what she knows."

"Of course," (she reflects), "revenge is only for petty notions, and it would be really cruel, unworthy a Brunette, for me to use my power over men in that way—what could they do, poor things, if I Once Started? And, after all, I do rather fancy my home and even—er—him. But if he ever—just once—goes too far . . . !"

"P. S. Naturally, there are exceptions to prove the rule; for instance, I encountered a square-jawed, companionable (even intelligent) blonde—once!"

"P. P. S. Some blondes are so dumb that they fatuously quote Anita Loos's novel, not realizing it's a satire on the Light-Headed Female!"

"P. P. P. S. My Artistic Conscience compelled me to adopt a temperate, unprejudiced attitude in the body of this piece, but now I feel free to express my—er—biological response to most blondes: They make me sick—and I don't mean ill!"

Three rousing cheers from all dark ladies and nut-brown maids!

And a still, small voice from the golden girl galaxy: "Now WHAT did a blonde ever do to HIM?"

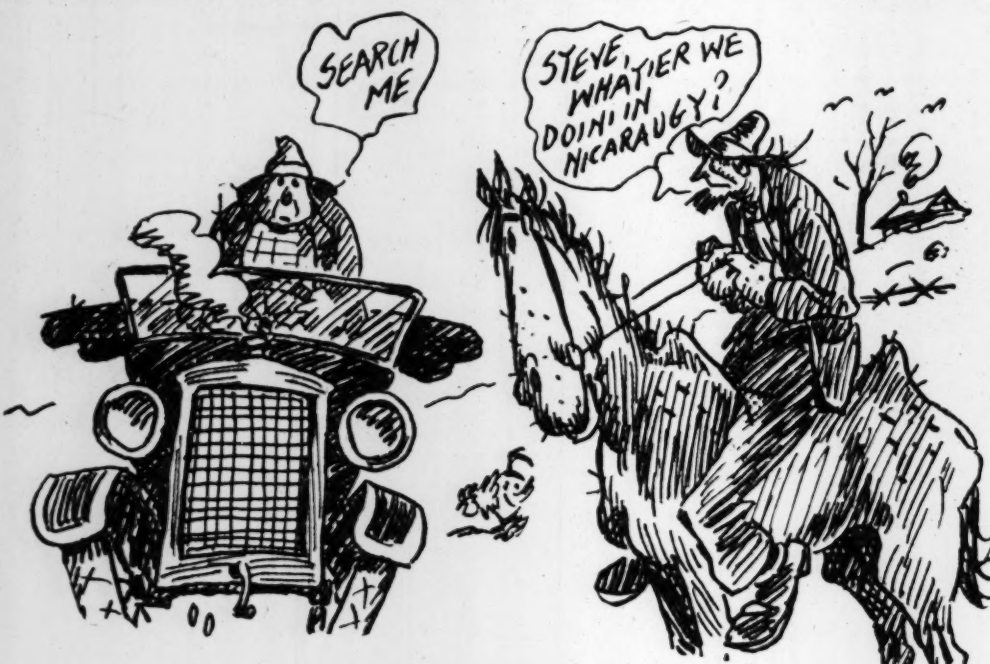

What Drives 'Em Silly.

Ten million imbeciles in the United States are predicted by the editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association, for Moses Fishbein, as a result of the increasing beauty experts. But we thought men had stopped trying to figure out whether or not they "don't paint"—it's really none of their business!

They're Not All Like That, Nowadays.

She beats it to the old boudoir, thinks what she thinks, and knows what she knows."

"Of course," (she reflects), "revenge is only for petty notions, and it would be really cruel, unworthy a Brunette, for me to use my power over men in that way—what could they do, poor things, if I Once Started? And, after all, I do rather fancy my home and even—er—him. But if he ever—just once—goes too far . . . !"

"P. S. Naturally, there are exceptions to prove the rule; for instance, I encountered a square-jawed, companionable (even intelligent) blonde—once!"

"P. P. S. Some blondes are so dumb that they fatuously quote Anita Loos's novel, not realizing it's a satire on the Light-Headed Female!"

"P. P. P. S. My Artistic Conscience compelled me to adopt a temperate, unprejudiced attitude in the body of this piece, but now I feel free to express my—er—biological response to most blondes: They make me sick—and I don't mean ill!"

Three rousing cheers from all dark ladies and nut-brown maids!

And a still, small voice from the golden girl galaxy: "Now WHAT did a blonde ever do to HIM?"

WOMAN'S WORK

By Lucy Lowell.

MRS. C. C. writes that she has solved the problem of the "working wife" by becoming one of them.

Here is her letter, in part: "Dear Lucy Lowell: It is true that more wives are going outside their homes to earn, and for the reason you state—high cost of living."

"I have five children, and my husband, being not well trained, earns a small salary. But I wanted my children to have as good as the ones they play with. So I took a course in salesmanship and have a good position in a women's wear shop."

"We have been able to buy our home, build a garage and have a small car since I started in to earn. My oldest girl, 17, stays home and takes care of the two babies—3 and 5. The oldest boy, 18, works, and that of 14 has a paper route and earns a little doing odd jobs."

"We all work together and get along fine, and I am much happier in the shop than I was doing housework, which I do not like. I think it's a great thing that women no longer have to be bound down to housework. MRS. C. C."

So Mrs. C. C. has solved her own problem—getting out of doing housework, which she does not like.

But I wonder just how much she is accomplishing in her avowed purpose of helping her children?

This girl of 17, for one; isn't it rather a tragic thing that the burden of rearing two little ones, 3 and 5, should be put upon her immature shoulders?

What of seventeen's future? Doesn't she belong in school or some place where she might be fitting herself to meet her own life rather than at home assuming a task which belongs to her mother?

What of the 3 and 5 year olds? However conscientious a sister may be, can she possibly care for them as well as their mother could?

And a boy of 16 turning in his earnings toward a garage and a little car!

Do YOU think this mother has solved a problem?

Frankly, I do NOT! I think she has thoughtlessly and maybe selfishly turned her back on duties she finds disagreeable.

I think that no owned home—no material things—ever can compensate her children for what she deliberately is taking from them—and that is herself.

What do YOU think about it?

MEDITATIONS

—OF A—

MARRIED WOMAN

By HELEN ROWLAND

POOR, LITTLE BA-BA.

These are sad days for the sweet young girl who goes to the wicked city, prepared to resist temptation and ready to "watch out for the wolves in sheep's clothing."

It is a shocking disappointment to be all armed for a noble struggle, and then to discover that there is nothing to struggle against.

For alas, there are no more villains! There are no more wicked wolves waiting to devour Little Red Riding Hood!

No longer is woman "pursued" by a bad, bold man, and her way beset with "pitfalls" and champagne and diamond bracelets. The only heartless men she meets in the city are the landlord who demands her rent in advance, and the subway guard who slams the door in her face.

These dull, prosaic days, most business men are merely sheep in wolves' clothing, which they wear to frighten the WOMEN.

They travel in droves and barricade themselves in bachelors' clubs, Y. M. S. A.'s, and bachelor apartment houses, against feminine invasion, knowing that in numbers there is safety.

Corner the masculine "wolf" and skin him, and you will find Mary's Little Lamb, trembling and bleating for mercy; begging not to be led to the matrimonial altar and offered up as a sacrifice.

When man ran after woman, he had to resort to "wiles" and innocent disguises to disarm her. Now that woman has man on the run, he has to resort to tricks and ferocious disguises to ESCAPE her!

When men go forth, they wrap their wolf's clothing around them, and growl menacingly at any sign of feminine familiarity.

In their offices they keep outposts, in the form of office boys, secretaries, janitors and telephone operators to warn them of a feminine attack, and HIDE piteously in their dens until the danger is over and the enemy has departed.

It is all very pathetic! It is harder for an innocent, helpless girl to get to the private office of a big business man, a theatrical manager or an editor, than it would be for her to get out of the bathroom dining-room without paying her check.

And even when she DOES manage to shove past his stern-eyed secretary and his snippy office-boy, she is apt to find the "wolf" cowering in his den and eyeing her suspiciously instead of waiting to devour her.

Alas, Desperate Desmond is no more; and Desperate Desmond cannot depend on the shapeliness of her knees or the dimple in her chin, to get her a job or a luncheon invitation. The modern "wolf" is mostly "wool" and awfully leary of being SHEARED!

The girl who goes to the big city looking for work is awfully likely to find just that—WORK! No excitement or temptation or danger—but work!

Scratch a modern "wolf" today, and you will find poor little Ba-ba!

The Call of the Smiling Pool

The bluebirds whistle, the robins sing,
But the Hyla's voice is the voice of spring.

—Sister South Wind.

FOR one reason or another Peter Rabbit had kept putting off a visit to the Smiling Pool. There had been so many returning friends to greet and so many interesting things to see elsewhere that Peter had neglected the Smiling Pool. But he knew, as you should know, that the earliest and surest signs of the return of Spring are the return of the Smiling Pool and along the Laughing Brook.

But now Peter was on his way over there. "Lipperty-lipperty-lip," he sang, pausing now and again to dash. Each time he paused he heard the high clear notes from the sweet singers of the Smiling Pool—peep, peep, peep, peep. They called Peter with a feeling of great which fairly bubbled up within him. Every time he stopped to listen he felt like kicking up his long legs and doing other foolish things for sheer joy. Now he was hampered on faster than ever. It seemed to him that he couldn't get over to the Smiling Pool soon enough. The result was that he didn't watch his step and he actually sent old Mr. Todd sprawling.

"Oh!" cried Peter. "Excuse me, Mr. Todd; please do excuse me. I really didn't mean to do it. I was in such a hurry to get over to the Smiling Pool that I wasn't watching as I should have watched, and I ran into you without seeing you. It is all because of those voices over there in the Smiling Pool."

Home, warty old Mr. Todd and puffed himself up with anger, but now at the mention of those voices in the Smiling Pool a soft look came into the beautiful golden eyes and he let the air out without saying a single angry word. "So you heard the call, too," said he to the Smiling Pool.

"You've guessed it, Peter," replied old Mr. Todd. "I'm on my way to join the spring chorus." Old Mr. Todd's beautiful golden eyes were now soft and dreamy. "It must be nice to be able to sing," said Peter wistfully.

"It is!" declared old Mr. Todd, and a curious little bag began to swell out in his throat. Then it disappeared. "I mustn't do that yet," said he apologetically. "I must do it until I get to the Smiling Pool. I want to sit in the water when I sing. Excuse me now, Peter, I must hurry on."

Mr. Todd turned, started on, hopped-hoppity-hoppity-hop, Peter almost laughed aloud as he started after him. Lipperty-lipperty-lipperty-lip. "I'll see you down there, Mr. Todd," cried Peter as he passed. "I'll see you down there and I hope I shall hear you sing."

Old Mr. Todd, nodded. He couldn't spare breath enough to speak. Peter hurried on. The nearer he drew to the Smiling Pool, the louder became the chorus. Sometimes there would be just a single voice—"Peep, peep, peep, peep." Then there would be two voices all together. Then they would die away to one voice and presently that would stop. But whether there were one voice or many voices, the call was not to be resisted.

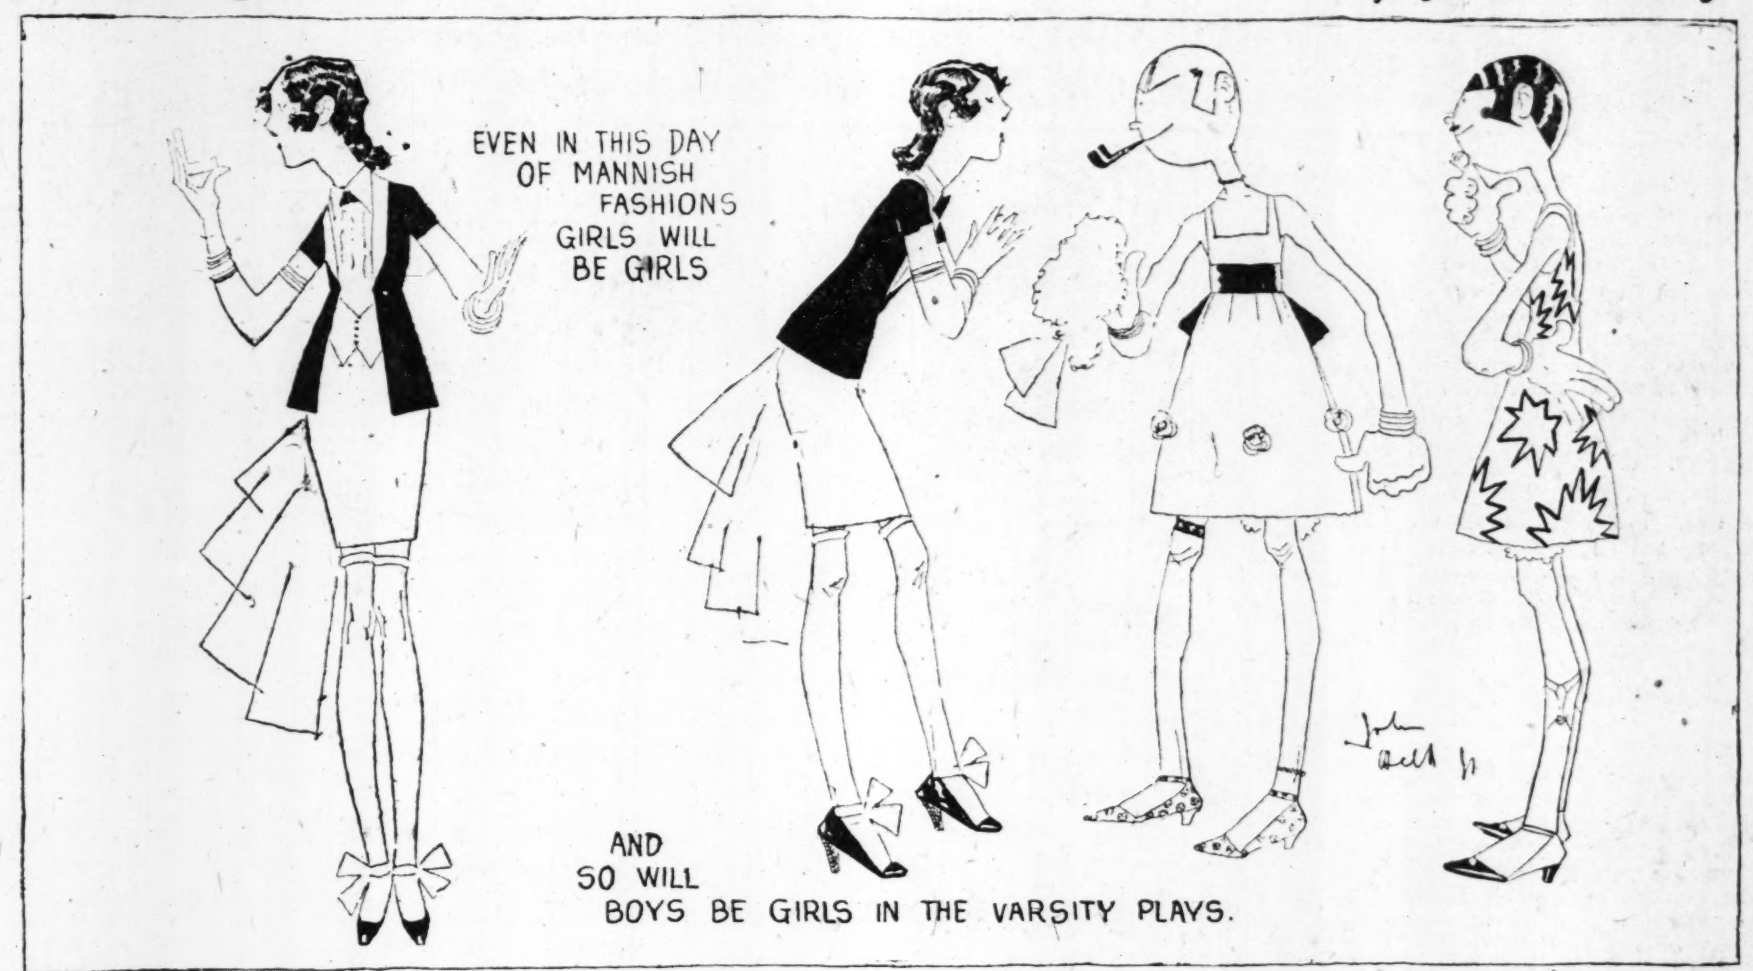

"So you heard the call, too," said he to the Smiling Pool.

A GOOD DADDY

By Angelo Patri.

Angelo Patri is just the principal of a New York grade school, but the late Charles W. Eliot, president of Harvard, said Patri is doing more for common-school education than any other person in America. This school, a model in every respect, is a mecca for teachers from all parts of the country.

GOOD mothers are everywhere, wherever there are children. But good daddies are not so plentiful. Not because they would not but because they have not thought they could be. The children were so little to begin with and a daddy could not help much with such a tiny and unfamiliar creature. And the first thing you knew the tiny creature had grown quite big—and a stranger. One can't be daddy to a stranger. Not a good daddy.

I happen to know a good daddy. That's what his children call him. He has five of them and whenever he comes into his house, whenever his name is mentioned there comes a glow in their faces that is lovely to see. It kindles slowly, showing first behind their noses and then spreads and takes on strength until, when little Angelo, the youngest, shouts out, "Daddy," it's like a heart fire behind their eyes.

When a person is ill, so ill that queer things flit about in the shadows and the bed clothes take voice sounds far away, and bones ache and there is no comfortable place in the one-time friendly bed, daddy holds one in his arms. A person feels so safe then. All night long daddy will hold you if you feel that way.

And when a person feels gay, daddy knows how to play. He can throw a ball, run a race, catch a trout, shoot a deer, sail an ice boat, build a hut, take a splinter out of your finger without hurting, find a sweet in his pocket for the right occasion. And he can tell stories. He makes you laugh. Sometimes he makes you laugh at yourself but you don't feel bad. Daddy is such a good story teller.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

The Library.

SOMETIMES a lonely wanderer comes in to browse among the narrow, crowded shelves, and there, secure from all the city's din, into the world of fantasy he delves. Ah, far into the lovely world of dream, he reads green meadows under turquoise skies, sails seas whose waves with emerald splendor gleam, or views strange lands where fabled cities rise! Within the quiet room the hours pass unnoted as a falling autumn leaf; unnoted, too, the worries that harass man's days, for here oblivion grants relief. Sometimes a lonely wanderer finds here a harbor from life's ever-restless seas; re-reads old tales, from childhood's hours dear, and gains sweet peace from happy memories. Caught in the thrall of fancy's bliss and pain, the page aglow with deathless loves and hates, the wanderer finds rest and home again with all the joys that lies within its gates.

The Diary of a New Father

Thursday night.
I let my hair grow long or keep it bobbed?" and I said, "You don't get me into that argument again. The last time you asked me, you did not speak to me for three days afterward, except when I used your toothbrush by mistake." Joan said, "There would not be any argument if you would only give me a sensible answer," and I said, "There are only two answers. One is to keep your hair short and the other is to let it grow long, and I have given you both of them and I am still wrong!" Joan said, "I was asking the girls at the bridge club about it the other night, and some of them said to keep it bobbed and the others said to let it grow," and I said, "I may be prejudiced, but that sounds almost like the advice I gave you. What started you thinking about your hair this time?" Joan said, "Well, we have a family now and if I ever intend to have long hair again I had better be starting. Besides, bobbed hair is so common now," and I said, "Then it is all settled. Let it grow." Joan said, "But long hair is so much trouble," and I said, "All right; keep it bobbed." Joan said, "I might have known you would not try to help me." Well, she worried about it in front of the mirror for awhile, and then she said, "Which way do you like it—bobbed or long?" and I should have known better than to say anything, but I said, "Bobbed," and she said, "How do you know?" You didn't meet me until after I had it cut." I said, "I know, but I saw a picture of you with long hair," and she said, "Well, what didn't you like about it?" and I said, "You looked even worse than you do now," and I should think anybody would know I was kidding, because no husband would have the nerve to say that and mean it.

THE RAGGED EDGE

A NEW STORY OF
LOVE, ADVENTURE
AND MYSTERY

By HENRY C.
ROWLAND

SYNOPSIS.

Granville Boyd, owner and navigator of the yacht Rigel, anchored in the harbor at Hamilton, Bermuda, is about to start on a semi-scientific expedition around the world. He is accompanied by his sister, Carillon, and a party of scientists. Carillon meets Bengal Dodd, who has brought his yacht Gunga to Bermuda on her maiden cruise and she asks Dodd to tag along with the Rigel. Obtaining Boyd's consent Dodd asks Jim Howland and his daughter Gertrude to accompany him. As they are about to leave, a widow at one of the Hamilton hotels loses her jewels and Carillon is suspected of the theft.

INSTALLMENT VI.

BENGAL TO THE RESCUE.

CARILLON lay silent, breathlessly so. She appeared to be weighing what Bengal had said. He had told her the truth, what he actually believed to be the case. But now as his eyes encompassed the whole of her, they caught, without gazing directly at it, the tension of that small pink foot, alternately drawn back in an arc, spread, then flexed, in a manner suggestive of reaction to some violent stimulus, mental, or even physical. Noting this, Bengal was not so sure about her. There was something accusatory about the movements of that little foot.

Carillon raised herself with a quick, lithe movement, like a yellow kitten turned on its back by a playful hand. She drew up her knees and clasped her hands over them, a favorite posture. The primrose gown fell open in front and Bengal saw that she wore the pale green swimming suit beneath. He did not wonder why the swimming suit when she was a prisoner. Instinct, deduction, his imaginative reconstruction told him that the girl had prepared for escape through the water at the first chance to offer. Passing instantly from that conviction to the question of how she might hope to manage it, Bengal glanced at the trunk hatch. Like most such it was detachable, could be unshipped by knocking free the heavy brass hooks on the inside. One of them was swinging free. Carillon followed his eyes, then smiled.

"You are quick on the detecting, Bengal. Hair trigger, one might say."

"Let's hope that India gave me some sort of birthright to compensate for clumsiness in other ways. Besides, you would scarcely slip on a bathing suit for comfort, in this stuffy place. No, I can't claim credit so far, especially as I know boats and how I would ooze out of here myself. . . . I could squeeze through the hatch. You'd slip out like a yellow cat through a coat sleeve. . . . If the quartermaster turned his back and kept it turned."

"Jansen would. He loves me like a Great Dane. Yachts like this fairly vibrate with a radio that isn't on the manifest, and you can bet it's got round without any whispering that I'm in trouble and likely to be pilloried or hanged in chains or something. B. W. I. penal procedure hasn't much bunk about it, and deep sea sailors know that. If my deck awab head were to pop up through that skylight and the rest of me wriggling out under it, Jansen would stand against the booby hatch of the forecastle staring over the bow."

Bengal nodded. "With a belaying pin in his fist, likely. But what then, Carillon?"

"Can't you guess?" She gave him a look charged with malice that had something infantile about it.

"The Gunga, I suppose. . . . and a request that I put to sea pronto, before you were discovered to be A. W. O. L."

"Yes," Carillon mused. "India certainly gave this child of her bosom something besides blue black hair and dreamy brown eyes. She would scarcely let him off without some inheritance of trouble, a birth tax set with her seal. I've read that India is like that, and comes to a focus in Calcutta. You would have done it, too, Bengal."

He nodded, absently. "For a price. India never does anything for nothing."

"What price, my rescue?"

"Benefit of clergy, at the first chance."

Her eyes shimmered at him, and the crooked smile twisted her thin red lips. "You'd want to marry me, kleptomaniac and all?"

"Yes, I would count on finding a counterpoise for that, or persuading the Old Gods to take off the curse."

"Pure pagan, aren't you. The Old Gods would need some stirring up. They'd have to do a lot of unraveling. It's woven into the texture of me, Bengal, and when they got it pulled out there mightn't be much left. I've heard that I was a fascinating baby, and whenever some pretty lady leaned over to inspect me I would grab at her pendant or earrings and hang on. Mother could always quiet me in collo or teasing by giving me a big polished amethyst she had. I hadn't learned values then."

"It's a curse that they exist. Amethysts are really more beautiful than black pearls."

Carillon shook her sun faded khaki curls. "Only to the child or savage. Not to the eye of the initiate. Just as many might find a healthy normal girl like Gertrude Howland more beautiful than a tormented one like me. I learned the secret of gems without instruction before I was eight. Father knew my trouble, so all the money went to Granville. He is a dear, and I'm sorry to make him so much bother."

"That's scarcely the word," Bengal said. "He is heartbroken. It's in a fair way to ruin his life. He is all wrong on this occasion, of course, but he doesn't know it and could scarcely be convinced."

A yellow gleam shone in Carillon's eyes, a gleam of anger, exasperation. "Then it's his own fault for being so dumb. You are the only one that's got sense enough to give me credit for having a little left."

Her eyes flickered and there was a restlessness under the hem of the silk robe she had smoothed down. That, Bengal perceived, was an involuntary expression to be on the alert for. A storm signal to be watched and noted—Carillon's barometer. Where others might betray their atmospheric pressure in face or hands or vaso-motor disturbance, this girl's needle registered in the lower extremities, what might be called a pedal ocellograph. It scored one for him that chance had calandered this friendly third degree examination when she was free footed, on her bunk in a swimming suit and sleeky silk. He smiled a little to himself at thought that if he had future need to get at the truth about her, he had best maneuver for similar conditions.

Rising abruptly, he said: "Sit tight for the present and let me revolve around this mess a little. Don't try to bolt. Take off that hot green coat of vicuna paint and make yourself cool and comfortable. I may be able to shift this deekload of suspicion to the shore." He reached up and slipped the brass hook into the eyebolt. "The whole case looks clear enough to me. Tell me one thing more. When she was in your service had you ever any reason to suspect this girl Irma of having at one time been a hotel mouse?"

"No."

"Well, then, she must be a more advanced one than I'd hoped. In that case I had better get going, as this is Friday and a ship sailing tomorrow. Au'voir and to translate, thrust against misfortune a strong heart."

He was avoiding Carillon's eyes, but they drew his own to them, their sheen like molten gold. "Why do you defend my case, Bengal?"

"Why do you defend my case, Bengal?"

"I owe you something, because I lost you that bet on the game, and started you into a fresh jam."

"I think you're entitled to a retainer."

"I don't, until in a position to do some retaining, myself. Stow the vamping in the refrigerator, Carillon. Your brother knew his man when he tossed me the key to this canary cage."

She sighed. "He's not the Bengal tiger I had hoped, but just a high caste Hindoo, and ascetic. I hope I'll fall in love with you, Bengal. It might cure me."

"Do you really want to be cured?" Bengal studied her thoughtfully.

She nodded so vigorously that the curly mop of tawny hair shook. It might have been likened to a chrysanthemum of soft neutral tint that one shakes free of raindrops. Carillon's hair was the one feature of her devoid of brilliancy, and this very dullness emphasized the other glowing traits, as might the lusterless old gold frame of a sargent. "Of course, I do. I wish that the very sight of a pearl or precious stone would make me want to feed the fishes."

"Well, that may happen yet. Just bear in mind they wouldn't give you any pearls or precious stones to play with when you get nervous in an institution. None of the shots to help out the rummies and hop heads and snowbirds. You would have to weather it through or blow up. They wouldn't even allow you your own collection, which must be considerable."

He glanced, as if casually, at her twin barometers and saw the light silk textile quiver. But she answered indifferently enough: "O, that's no great box of toys."

Bengal knew that she lied.

Looking Ahead to Vacation Days

By Wanda Barton.

VACATION baggage is always a consideration in the family, whether we are only week-enders or real trippers. At this season of the year, nearly all of the better shops have bargains in such things. If we take advantage of these off-season bargains we not only save money, but we do not have to run around looking for the things in hot weather.

Dress suitcases are a boon for the traveler who must count pennies. In the first place, the cases, if well packed, hold an astonishing amount of stuff. Again, we meet in all well-traveled sections, porters who help us with them for a small fee. This saves worrying with trunks, expressage and delays.

The wear of an enameled duck or auto leather suitcase is two reasons at least, and with reasonable care three. The cases made with the light-colored bindings and corners are rather smart-looking and wear well. In packing, if the heavier things are packed on either side low to the hinges, the case will wear best.

Then for the short trips there is the light-weight leather pouch. They may be found in two sizes and they are fine for sport things, bathing suits and such things. The long English rolls, or hold-alls, as they are called on the other side, hold a great amount. Underwear, for instance, and sport things carried in the roll will leave the suitcase for the more particular apparel.

Overnight bags are a varied commodity. At all prices, in all sizes and in all leathers, silks, satins and tapestries. Fitted, unfitted and partially fitted. The soft ones hold the most, but any of them is capable of carrying enough in these days of silk undies and negligees.

The Greatest Story in the World

And there was a famine in the land, beside the first famine that was in the days of Abraham. And Isaac went unto Abimelech, king of the Philistines unto Gerar. And the Lord appeared unto Isaac, and said, Go not down into Egypt. Sojourn in this land, and I will be with thee, and unto thy seed, I will give these countries, and I will perform the oath which I swore unto Abraham thy father; because Abraham obeyed my voice, and kept my charge, my commandments, my statutes, and my laws.

And Isaac dwelt in Gerar: And the men of the place asked him of his wife; and he said: She is my sister; for he feared to say, She is my wife, lest, said he, the men of the place should kill me for Rebekah: because she was fair to look upon.

And it came to pass, when he had been there a long time that Abimelech king of the Philistines looked out at a window, and saw, and, behold, Isaac was sporting with Rebekah his wife.

And it came to pass, when he had been there a long time that Abimelech king of the Philistines looked out at a window, and saw, and, behold, Isaac was sporting with Rebekah his wife.

In the Footsteps of Abraham Lincoln

ON MAY 16, 1860, THE REPUBLICAN NATIONAL CONVENTION MET AT CHICAGO IN THE WIGWAM, A HUGE BUILDING SPECIALLY CONSTRUCTED FOR THE OCCASION. OVER TEN THOUSAND PERSONS CROWDED THE GREAT HALL. THIS WAS THE FIRST NATIONAL POLITICAL CONVENTION HELD IN CHICAGO.

HE FAVORITE CANDIDATE AT CHICAGO WAS WILLIAM H. SEWARD OF NEW YORK. HE LED ON THE FIRST BALLOT. ON THE SECOND LINCOLN'S VOTE HAD INCREASED. ON THE THIRD LINCOLN LACKED ONLY TWO AND A HALF VOTES TO GIVE HIM THE NOMINATION. IN A DEAD SILENCE THE VOICE OF THE CHAIRMAN OF THE OHIO DELEGATION RANG OUT: "I RISE TO CHANGE FOUR VOTES FROM MR. CHASE TO MR. LINCOLN." A WILD OUTBURST OF APPLAUSE GREETED THIS STATEMENT. IT MEANT LINCOLN'S NOMINATION. © McClure Newspaper Syndicate

THE MEMBERS OF THE NEW YORK DELEGATION, THOUGH HEARTBROKEN AT SEWARD'S DEFEAT, WERE LOYAL TO THEIR PARTY. WILLIAM F. EVARTS, THEIR SPOKESMAN, ROSE WITH TEARS IN HIS EYES TO MOVE THAT THE NOMINATION OF LINCOLN BE MADE UNANIMOUS. THE ACT BROUGHT FORTH ANOTHER WILD OUTBURST OF APPLAUSE.

LINCOLN, WHO HEARD THE RETURN OF THE BALLOTING IN SPRINGFIELD, LEARNED THAT HE WAS REELECTED SOON AFTER THE BOOMING CANNON ON THE ROOF OF THE WIGWAM ANNOUNCED THE FACT TO THE CHEERING CHICAGO CROWDS.

G. H. G.—The landlord can not make you pay the month's rent unless he has received the rent for the month period.

MARY R.—Joint tenancy and a tenancy in common are alike to the extent that in both cases the co-tenants held by unity of possession. The essential difference is that joint tenants hold the property by one joint title and in one right, whereas tenants in common hold by several titles or have one title and several rights. They also differ in that the right of survivorship exists in the case of a joint tenancy but not in the case of a tenancy in common. According to some authorities, a joint tenant may convey his interest to his co-tenant by a release, which a tenant-in-common cannot do. The most important difference between the two tenancies is the right of survivorship which exists in the case of a joint tenancy. Thus, if A and B are joint tenants and A dies, B becomes the sole owner of the entire property. If A and B are tenants-in-common, and A dies, A's heirs would inherit his undivided share of the property.

This treatment is to be repeated as often as necessary. Do not go near a blazing fire or gas light when using the kerosene.
